Stephen Sees Incentive For Non-Profit Groups

Pump-Priming Fund Urged for City Housing

By DESMOND BILL

Mayor Hugh Stephen proposed Monday that Victoria set up a $150,000 pump-priming fund that could result in construction of $3,000,000 worth of low-rental housing in the city.

It would be used to help non-profit organizations such as church groups, unions and service clubs willing to sponsor housing projects.

The mayor suggested the money be given to such groups for up to 5 per cent of the cost of a project. The groups would raise the other 5 per cent required as a down payment and the balance of 90 per cent would come from NHA loans.

It was the major new initiative that he proposed in his inaugural address to the first meeting of this year's council.

But his speech — which took him one hour and 20 minutes to read — also reviewed practically every aspect of the city's business during 1968.

It ranged from a warning about the "frightening" increase in glue-sniffing among juveniles to delight over the "astounding" increase in assessments.

Among the mayor's proposals for this year were:

● A new zoning concept for downtown development.

● Finishing the enclosure of Bowker Creek inside Victoria's boundaries.

● Construction of a new wading pool in Beacon Hill Park.

● A new method for drawing up the city's operating budget.

● Provision of funds to enable police to travel to other provinces and arrest men who desert their wives and ignore court orders to maintain them and their families.

The mayor said his proposals were necessarily fewer than usual because major programs must await preparation of a new five-year capital budget that will not be drawn up until later this year.

Twice in his speech he was critical of the provincial government.

He deplored its refusal "to make even a token start" on the new Patricia Bay Highway. One result has been that the city's new north-south artery, Rose Street, "ends in nothing at our boundaries, whence all the traffic funnels back again on to an already overcrowded Douglas Street."

And he said the government's new driver demerit system had more than doubled the court load of cases, which would result in additional costs, coupled with a loss of revenue from the former system of fines. He said that if municipalities were to continue to pay local court costs then they must either be given a government subsidy or allowed to levy costs against drivers receiving demerits.

The mayor said he spent more time working on sewage disposal problems than any other subject during last year, but, despite increased regional cooperation, the issue was still at an impasse.

He said this was because the proposal to discharge sewage into the ocean had generated more "emotional and subjective" opinion than any other issue. Patience and restraint would be necessary to solve it, he said.

President's Pay Packet Doubled to $200,000

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The House of Representatives voted Monday to double the pay of the president — from $100,000 to $200,000 — effective with Richard Nixon's inauguration despite an economizer's contention the president-elect did not want his salary boosted.

In addition to his taxable salary, the president would continue to receive a taxable $50,000 to cover expenses and nontaxable $40,000 for other travel and entertainment expenses. Congress appropriates separate funds to operate the White House.

Sirhan Trial Starts Today

All indications were that the trial would open as scheduled at 9:30 a.m. today despite the discussions in the chambers of Superior Judge Herbert Walker, who will hear the lengthy proceedings.

Judge Walker said the closed meeting was called to "clear up certain pre-trial matters." He said that if any motions were made they would be disclosed later.

The trial will be in an armor-plated eighth floor courtroom, where windows have been covered with sheets of steel.

Jury selection is expected to take up the first two weeks of the trial, which may last two months or longer. More than 200 witnesses may be called, including the defendant's mother.

Airline Repeat

Tragedy Like Tragedy

BRADFORD, Pa. (AP) — An Allegheny Airlines propjet crashed while trying to land in a light snow Monday night, almost precisely the same way a sister flight crashed here two weeks ago.

Eleven of the 28 persons aboard were killed. Of the 17 survivors one was in critical condition.

The Convair 580, Flight 737 which originated in Washington and stopped in Harrisburg, crashed into 15 inches of snow on a golf course and flipped upside down. That was the same way Flight 736 went down Christmas Eve, killing 20. Twenty seven survived.

WINTER STORM

A spokesman for Allegheny Airlines, which has lost only three planes in its history, said there was no immediate explanation for the similarities.

The flight was running an hour late because of a winter storm that swept through the state.

The Christmas Eve tragedy also happened on the heels of a winter storm. The plane went down in an icy marsh midway up a mountain about three miles south of the airport. It skidded several hundred feet, then flopped on its back, leaving some survivors hanging from their seatbelts.

Position on Rhodesia

Promise to Blacks Backed by Canada

LONDON (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau lined up with President Kenneth Kaunda of Zambia Monday in opposing any weakening in Britain's original promise to the black Rhodesians.

Trudeau said at a news conference that he and Kaunda at a 75-minute meeting affirmed their backing for the principle that Britain must not give legal independence to Rhodesia before the Africans are given majority rule in that white-supremacy country.

OPPOSITE VIEW

Trudeau said Sunday that Britain has departed from its original commitment to the black Rhodesians—no independence before majority rule for them.

He has said that all arguments on the issue have been exhausted and that it is largely an illusion that the Commonwealth could settle it.

Rhodesia will be discussed at the conference but the Nigeria-Biafra war is not on the agenda.

DEFENCE DISCUSSED

They discussed Anglo-Canadian defence, foreign, trade and economic affairs.

Informants said Wilson tried to persuade Trudeau to maintain Canada's commitment on the North Atlantic Treaty Organization.

NATO is not on the Commonwealth meeting agenda, but the informants said Wilson made a determined bid to win an assurance that Canada would continue its role in Europe's defence.

Trudeau said Wilson and his colleagues did not look flustered or in the least disturbed by the fact that Canada is reviewing

Police Intervention

Professors Say 'March In'

LONDON (CP) — Seven Canadian professors have urged a declaration of Canadian readiness "to consider with like-minded Commonwealth members whether the time has come for international police intervention" in Rhodesia.

But such readiness should not involve any pre-judging of the issue either way, the Canadian academics add.

All professors of the social sciences, they also call on Prime Minister Trudeau to reaffirm the principle of no independence for Rhodesia without African majority rule.

The teachers make their statements in a letter to The Times today.

Signatories of the letter are Gerald Caplin of the Ontario Institute of Education; Frank Chalk of Sir George Williams, Peter Gutkind of McGill and Donald Savage of Loyola, all Montreal universities; and Gerald Helleiner, David Nowlan and Cranford Pratt, all of the University of Toronto.

The signatories say they all have "African experience."

Building Help Easier

Letter Enough for $1,000

By IAN STREET

British Columbians in future will be able to get a promise in writing that the government will provide them with a $1,000 home acquisition grant so that they can use it in arranging financing of a new home.

Municipal Affairs Minister Dan Campbell announced Monday that although the actual grant will continue to be made only when the owner is in occupancy, provincial housing authorities will provide a letter of intent to those who meet requirements.

Under regulations in effect until now, persons seeking the grant had to occupy the house before making application for the $1,000. The new system will let owners pre-qualify in what Mr. Campbell said was an all-out drive to increase the number of new housing starts in the province this spring.

Latest figures, made public last week, showed housing starts in major B.C. municipalities in the first 10 months of 1968 increased 6 per cent over the corresponding period in the record year of 1967. Units completed were 23 per cent higher than the same period in 1967.

Home builders who qualify for the provincial grants, Mr. Campbell said, can use the letter of intent obtained from the housing administration to obtain greater flexibility in financing. "We want to give it a lift now," he added, "to permit more housing starts to get under way in the spring."

Meanwhile, provincial housing officials disclosed that a total of 43,800 home acquisition grants have been made since the program began April 1, 1966.

Although there is no official breakdown, it is estimated that approximately 75 per cent of the grants were for the $500 initial amount, which applied to both new and existing homes and was dropped last July.

Discotheque Foursome

Closed-Lips 'Nice Girl' Trudeau's Dinner Date

● Jet-set Eva strikes out. Page 15.

LONDON (CP)—Prime Minister Trudeau went dining and dancing with an English girl Monday night at a swinging discotheque in affluent Berkeley Square.

The girl was not Eva Rittinghausen, a self-described jet-set divorcee whom Trudeau took to lunch Saturday.

Trudeau said Monday in reply to questions about his relationship with Miss Rittinghausen that he does not suffer indiscreet women gladly. She had given a dozen or so interviews about her meeting with the prime minister.

Trudeau also said earlier Monday that he was going to date "a very nice girl and I'm sure she won't talk to you." The "you" meant reporters.

His Monday night date was described by one of his aides as a university graduate about 30 or 32 years old whom Trudeau had known for a couple of years. The aide declined to give her name.

Trudeau and his date were accompanied by Gordon Gibson, his executive assistant, and Gibson's wife.

ANDY CAPP

North Ireland Beefs Police

BELFAST (AP) — Northern Ireland's government ordered a massive police buildup Monday to forestall further civil disorders such as the bloody rioting in Londonderry during the weekend.

The government refused in a three-hour emergency meeting, however, to issue a blanket ban on all political parades and demonstrations.

The cabinet, meeting with Prime Minister Terence O'Neill, ordered Home Minister William Long to build up Northern Ireland's constabulary to any level he considered necessary to maintain law and order throughout Ulster's six counties.

ACTION COMMITTEES

In Londonderry, Northern Ireland's second city, action committees representing the minority Roman Catholics were being formed and special vigilante forces were being set up to guard Roman Catholic districts of the city.

Nearly 200 persons were injured in two nights of turmoil in Londonderry and Roman Catholics charged that riot police went on a rampage in their districts early Sunday, smashing windows systematically and beating up women and children.

PROBE ORDERED

The police denied the charges but ordered an investigation.

Long indicated after the cabinet meeting that his first step in reinforcing the police will be to mobilize more part-time policemen, members of the Ulster special constabulary. This would free riot-hardened regulars to handle civil disorders such as have swept Northern Ireland since Oct. 5. A communique issued after the cabinet meeting said the point has now been reached at which "agitation is not just expressing a legitimate point of view but is attempting to bypass and discredit the ordinary processes of democratic government."

UPHOLD RIGHTS

The government stated its determination to uphold the rights of free speech and lawful, peaceful assembly. It said it was equally determined to "confront and bring to justice" any person or groups trying to take the law into their own hands.

Quiet returned to Londonderry as workmen cleared up the debris of the weekend's rioting. Damage was estimmed at more than $250,000.

MINORITY CLAIMS

The Roman Catholic minority among Northern Ireland's 1,500,000 people claims it is discriminated against in jobs and housing, among other things. The militant Protestants see the civil rights campaign as a threat to Protestant domination of the Northern Ireland government and to the six counties' ties with Britain.

Pump-Priming Fund

Another regional matter "attended by some emotionalism" was hospital construction, he said. Residents of the northern peninsula had tried to "cast the core municipalities in the role of selfishly seeking to deprive their fellow citizens of a reasonable standard of local hospital care." He said that, again, common sense must be given time to prevail.

ROTATION URGED

Mayor Stephen also moved to meet criticism last year from Victoria aldermen that the present fixed system of representation on the regional board deprived some aldermen of participation in regional decisions.

He said he would recommend that Victoria representatives on the board be rotated every four months so that over a year the six senior members of council would participate.

The mayor said that in 25 years of watching civic affairs, he had never seen an issue that had been so misunderstood as the proposal to build a civic auditorium-convention centre.

Mayor Stephen said the proposal to build the centre beside the Empress Hotel would save the city more than $1,000,000, compared with the cost of building a free-standing centre.

CONSISTENT OFFER

And he emphasized that council "has consistently offered to consider any concrete and positive offers from other developers."

Whatever proposal eventually met the criteria for a centre would be placed before the voters for approval, he promised. He said a centre was one of the most promising ways that the city could promote its visitor industry.

FAVORABLE POSITION

Mayor Stephen said his studies made him think Victoria had one of the most favorable debt positions of any city in Canada. Its per capita debt increased from $138.75 in 1967 to $140.88 last year, but its debt per $1,000 assessment was reduced in that period from $66.53 to $65.13.

The mayor also announced that the 1969 assessment roll showed an increase of $22,850,000, compared with an increase of $8,170,648 last year. He said the increase was due to sharp increases in the value of residential land and to new construction.

GLUE SNIFFING

In his review of the work of the police department, Mayor Stephen said the most frightening development last year was the increase in glue-sniffing among young teenagers. More than half of those appearing in juvenile court had tried it, he said.

Another hazard he noted was that two of the three deaths by fire in the city last year were due to careless smoking habits. Mayor Stephen said careless smoking was the single most serious cause of all fires.

Derailment Sets Gas Tanker Afire

CHASE, B.C. (CP) — About 25 cars of a west-bound Canadian Pacific Railway freight train were derailed late Tuesday depositing a burning propane gas tanker across the Trans-Canada Highway near this community about 30 miles east of Kamloops.

RCMP said the burning tanker was well away from any built-up area.

A CPR spokesman said the 64-car train included two propane tank cars. The second one also left the track, but it tumbled into a rock cut away from the highway. It was not burning.

Traffic on the Trans-Canada Highway was rerouted about 80 miles around the wreck between Chase and Salmon Arm. Officials said the detour would remain in effect at least until late today, "and possibly longer."

CPR officials said rail passengers would be bused around the site.

There were no injuries and cause of the derailment was not immediately known.

Federals, Biafrans

Students Rally For Both Sides

LONDON (Reuters) — Hundreds of African students staged rival demonstrations in London Monday night over the Nigeria-Biafra civil war.

More than 1,500 Biafrans chanted and danced in torchlight processions through central London to protest federal attacks on Biafra.

Two hundred policemen ringed the Nigerian high commission building as demonstrators hurled flaming torches and waved banners saying "Biafra is Britain's Belsen."

Britain supplies arms to federal Nigeria.

They arrived in 15 buses to greet Chief Obafemi Awolowo, head of the Nigerian delegation to the conference of Commonwealth prime ministers opening here today.

Awolowo told reporters he would oppose any attempt to put the Nigerian civil war on the agenda of the conference.

its NATO and other defence and foreign policies.

Trudeau also met privately with Prime Minister Keith Holyoake of New Zealand.

He said Holyoake is an old hand at Commonwealth conferences and that as a newcomer, he wanted Holyoake's wise counsel.

Trudeau said they also talked as Pacific nations and dealt with Vietnam and China.

BEST SOLUTION

Trudeau said he and Kaunda agree that Nihmar—no independence before majority African rule—is the best solution for the Rhodesian problem.

He said he does not anticipate conference discussion of the possibility of use of military force against Rhodesia.

Trudeau said Sunday that as a matter of principle, he always puts military solutions in last place.

A news conference was also held by another Canadian, Arnold Smith, secretary-general of the Commonwealth.

SHORTSIGHTED POLICY

He was asked whether there will be any conference discussion on the possible winding up of the association.

He said he does not think any body wants to wind up the Commonwealth. It would be extremely short-sighted of any of the 28 Commonwealth leaders to even suggest such a course.

Talk of breaking up the Commonwealth could be attributed to "reciprocal disenchantment" among different color, language and economic groups and "easy cynicism" in some countries about constitutional government.

Headache in Young Children May Be Due to Migrane

Your Good Health

By G. T. THOSTESON, MD

Dear Dr. Thosteson: My daughter, 8, has been complaining of headaches about twice a week for the last year. It does not seem normal that so young a child would have headaches.

I mentioned this to the doctor, her eyes were checked and are all right, and no reason was given for the headaches.

The headaches occur any time or day of the week. She rarely complains of not feeling well because, active as she is, she knows I would restrict her from playing. But sometimes the headaches hurt her so that she asks for relief. She also mentions an upset stomach along with the headaches.

Headaches and upset stomachs are common in adults, but in small children what is the cause?—Mrs. H.T.

About 2 per cent of children have migraine (which so often involves an upset stomach as well as the headache) according to Dr. R. E. Ryan, of St. Louis. Dr. A. P. Friedman, another authority on headaches, finds that 35 per cent of children with migraine complained of headache before the fourth year. Both say such headaches are not uncommon before 10.

I am not saying that your youngster has migraine, but it's a diagnosis often overlooked in children. Also keep in mind that migraine in a child is usually diffuse rather than one-sided as is usually the case with adults.

There are many causes of these migraine headaches it seems; sometimes one, sometimes several. Children with such headaches often have parents who had the same trouble. Allergy is sometimes involved. Emotional tension is another trigger. This may arise in an inharmonious home. Or it may be competition with playmates or brothers or sisters. In some instances glandular factors are present.

Which, if any, of these factors may have a bearing I cannot, of course, attempt to say. Perhaps none; the headaches may be of some quite different type.

But this I will suggest: since the headaches are so frequent, I would have a more thorough physical checkup.

I would also keep a headache diary, trying eventually to note whether any particular food is eaten before an attack, or whether there is any pattern of emotional tension, some episode at school, in the home, or with playmates. This sometimes gives a very valuable clue to a precipitating factor.

Beyond that, such technical studies as a metabolism test, electro-encephalogram, possibly even skull X-rays, may be needed.

Attention all Smokers: We have received confirmation that the evidence linking cigarette smoking to athlete's foot is statistically inconclusive.

This agent's wife was a very, very jealous woman. Every evening when he came home he had to submit to a close inspection—the tiniest hair on his coat made her wail about how unfaithful he was to her. Then, one night, she didn't find a single hair. She collapsed on the sofa and burst into tears. "O-o-o-oh," she wailed, "even bald women, now!"

Little boy to little girl: "Are you the opposite sex or am I?"

A deaf woman entered a church with an ear trumpet. Soon after she seated herself, an usher tiptoed over and whispered:

Saigon Blast

Cabinet Man Assassinated

Combat police in regular army uniforms were assigned to guard each cabinet member and give him an armed Jeep escort wherever he went.

While there were hints in Saigon newspapers that the fatal blast which wrecked Tri's car could have been something other than a Viet Cong attack, the government called it "an act of terrorism by the Communists."

Political developments overshadowed the military, though thousands of American, South Vietnamese and other allied troops and scores of aircraft hunted comunists in widely separated sectors.

President Nguyen Van Thieu's government maintained silence on President-elect Nixon's appointment of Henry Cabot Lodge as his chief negotiator in the Paris peace talks. A spokesman turned aside all questions with: "No comment."

HARD LINE

Unofficially, however, South Vietnamese were inclined to view the appointment of Lodge, twice ambassador to South Vietnam, and the retention of Ambassador Ellsworth Bunker in Saigon, as indications that the Nixon administration would take a hard line in Paris.

The South Vietnamese army, confirming weekend reports, announced it plans to release 10 Viet Cong prisoners of war as a humanitarian gesture. They are to be turned loose in a ceremony at Bien Hoa, a military base 15 miles north of Saigon.

U.S. GRENADE

Tri was wounded fatally when the bomb, apparently fashioned from a U.S. grenade fortified with plastic expolosive, demolished his car at a crowded Saigon intersection.

His driver was killed and three other persons—two bodyguards and a passerby—were wounded.

Witnesses said the bomb was tossed by two youths who escaped on a motorcycle.

Tri was the first high official of the South Vietnamese government to be assassinated since President Nguyen Van Thieu took office in November, 1967. But almost all those of ministerial rank have received threats against their lives.

Lodge Draws Shrug

PARIS (UPI)—North Vietname Monday brushed off the appointment of Henry Cabot Lodge to head the U.S. negotiating team at the Paris talks as "an internal U.S. problem."

The official North Vietnamese delegation spokesman, Nguyen Thanh Le, repeated Hanoi's contention that, "if the United States wants to solve the Vietnam problem, it must stop the aggression."

Criticism Closes Paper

SAIGON (Reuters) — The South Vietnamese information ministry Monday suspended the Vietnamese-language daily Thoi Dai Moi (New Era) for three days.

An information ministry spokesman said the Saigon paper was suspended for using offending terms in criticising members of the National Assembly.

Jordanian Villagers Killed

Israel, Lebanon Talking

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Three Jordanians, one adult and two children, were killed and five wounded by Israeli artillery fire Monday on Safi village, a Jordanian spokesman said. The announcement came amid reports that Israeli and Lebanese officials had met to try and ease tensions between their two countries.

The Jordanian spokesman said that during the 20-minute shelling of the village, two Israeli helicopters circled over the area, firing with machine-guns on villagers.

OTHER CLASHES

Two other clashes between Jordanian and Israeli forces were reported in the southern Jordan Valley but there were no Jordanian casualties, the spokesman said. Both clashes lasted about a half hour.

In Beirut, Premier Abdullah Al-Yavi said Monday night he had discussed the resignation of the Lebanese government with President Charles Helou.

But he denied he submitted its resignation in writing.

Yafi said he left the fate of the government for the president to decide. He would go on with his duties until Helou took a decision, he said.

There was speculation since the Israeli reprisal attack on Beirut airport that the cabinet would resign to give way for a national government or an enlargement of the present government including more parliamentary blocs.

The frontier meeting between Israeli and Lebanese spokesmen was held Monday to discuss Israeli charges that Arab commandos were operating out of Lebanon and Israeli villages.

Disclosure that direct talks took place between representatives of the two countries was almost cetain to embarrass the government in Beirut, where feeling still runs high over the Israeli raid on the Beirut airport.

The government said the talks dealt with "investigation of complaints and disputes arising from violations of the terms of the 1948 armistice agreement."

Lebanon claims that the guerrillas do not use their country as a base for attacks.

Lebanese Defence Minister Hussein Ouweini says Israel turned down a proposal by observers into Israel to investigate charges that guerrillas came from Lebanon.

A Beirut newspaper claimed the Palestinian guerrillas have been rounded up and tortured in southern Lebanon. It said demonstrators rallied in the southern city of Sidon and vowed to secure the commandos' release.

Elsewhere, Jordanian and Israeli forces clashed for 25 minutes Monday near Baqura village in the North Jordan Valley, a Jordanian military spokesman said.

OPENED FIRE

He said the Israelis opened fire and the Jordanians replied. There were no Jordanian casualties, he added.

In Moscow, Gunnar Jarring, UN Middle East mediator, said he will fly to Oslo today for talks with UN Undersecretary Ralph Bunche on the timing of his return to the Middle East for further talks with both sides.

In a Cairo television interview, Abdel Khaik Hassouna, secretary-general of the Arab League, said the Middle East crisis has reached a dangerous point which "does not threaten the region only, but the whole world."

He also said an Arab summit meeting is needed to agree on a unified plan on military and political levels.

SECURITY FIRST

In Jerusalem, a record Israeli budget calling for three-quarters of all taxation revenue to be spent on defence was presented to the Kuesset (legislature).

Finance Minister Zeev Sharef said the budget would total $7,850,000,000 (Israeli) which is about $2,378,000,000.

"Security comes first," Sharef said, "while all other needs must take what is left over."

French Parts Ban Blow to Israelis

PARIS (UPI)—The French government has added an embargo on spare parts for aircraft already sold to Israel and on ammunition and "certain naval equipment" to its earlier embargo on the sale of aircraft to Israel, Israeli embassy sources said Monday.

Embassy sources said the embargo touched mainly spare parts for French helicopters and Mirage jet fighters supplied long ago.

The sources said the French began the embargo two days ago by stopping all military material destined for Israel at customs with the explanation export permits were no longer valid.

The French did not officially inform the Israelis of the embargo in advance, they said, adding that it constitutes a "serious danger" to the Israeli air force.

Even though France clamped an embargo soon after the June, 1967, Israeli-Arab war on 50 Mirage jet fighters partly paid for by Israel, France had continued to send spare parts for other Mirage planes already in Israeli hands.

Troubles Snag Airlift

FRANKFURT, Germany (UPI)—Bad weather and mechanical difficulties Monday plagued a giant transatlantic U.S. military airlift of men and material designed to perfect techniques of reinforcing western European defences.

Only five C141 Starlifter jets of seven U.S. Military Airlift Command transports flying in units of 12,000 troops and 3,500 airmen, landed at Frankfurt's Rhine-main air base on schedule.

One C133 Cargomaster prop jet, held up by mechanical trouble in Goose Bay, Labrador, landed at Frankfurt Monday night. Another, delayed by weather in the Azores Islands, was expected to reach Frankfurt early this morning.

Suddenly My Memory Failed Me!

A noted publisher in Chicago reports there is a simple technique for acquiring a powerful memory which can pay you real dividends in both business and social advancement and works like magic to give you added poise, necessary self-confidence and greater popularity.

According to this publisher, many people do not realize how much they could influence others simply by remembering accurately everything they see, hear or read. Whether in business, at social functions or even in casual conversations with new acquaintances, there are ways in which you can dominate each situation by your ability to remember.

To acquaint the readers of this paper with the easy-to-follow rules for developing skill in remembering anything you choose to remember, the publishers have printed full details of their self-training method in a new booklet, "Adventures in Memory," which will be mailed free to anyone who requests it. Czech Liberal Ousted

Party Balks Slovak Move

PRAGUE (UPI) — The official voice of the Czech branch of the Communist Party Monday night officially endorsed the Slovak Party demand for the demotion of Liberal leader Josef Smrkovshy. The move apparently sealed Smrkovsky's political fate.

The government took the unusual step of denying as "unfounded" rumors sweeping the nation that Soviet troops had reoccupied factories, newspaper offices and government buildings apparently because of the crisis over Smrkovsky.

Smrkovsky, a Czech who is the president of the National Assembly, has been the target of Soviet criticism because of his progressive policies, and there have been reports that he may be ousted.

DEMAND SUPPORTED

He is extremely popular with millions of Czechs, but Slovaks oppose him on nationalistic grounds.

The endorsement of Smrkovsky's demotion Monday night came from the Communist Party bureau for the Czech regions. It supported the Slovak demand that the post of parliamentary chief be given to a Slovak.

"We consider it correct that the right of the Slovak nation to representation should be recognized immediately in the person of the president of the federal assembly," the Czech party bureau statement said.

"A Slovak who has authority and who is recognized by both nations will be nominated into this office."

Independence Coming For Anguilla

BASSETERRE, St. Kitts (Reuters) — Anguilla will announce a unilateral declaration of independence Thursday, reports Beacon, an Anguillan independent newspaper.

Anguilla, the smallest island of the three-island state of St. Kitts - Nevis - Anguilla, broke away from the central government in an armed rebellion May 30, 1967.

The 6,000 inhabitants of the 35-square-mile Caribbean island claimed they were neglected by the central government led by Premier Robert Bradshaw.

An interim one-year period during which the tiny breakaway island was run by its own council and British civil servant Tony Lee will expire Wednesday. Beacon says Anguilla would reaffirm a position it took prior to the start of the interim period.

when it comes to service

LYNN FOURT . . . telephone operator, Victoria

Service exists only when people make it happen.

At B.C. Telephone service is our business, so our people must know how to make it happen.

That's why we take special care in the selection and training of our people—people like the operator pictured here.

She is one of some 2,000 operators employed by the company in communities throughout British Columbia, each one specially trained in B.C. Telephone's operator instruction program, conducted at a cost of half a million dollars a year.

This training is designed to equip them to provide service—whether in placing calls to distant places; in finding help quickly in an emergency; in providing telephone numbers you can't find in your directory; in handling calls to and from radiotelephones in cars and ships and remote settlements; or in giving general telephone assistance.

Others among B.C. Telephone's more than 7,200 employees build and maintain facilities which make today's dial telephone system work automatically. Frequently, you don't require operator assistance when using the telephone, even in placing calls to distant places.

But when you do, they are available—because telephone people make it happen.

A Nation's Duty

IT WOULD BE UNWISE to jump to a conclusion that Prime Minister Trudeau has in mind any drastic reduction of the armed forces of this country. But level-headed men have interpreted recent remarks of his as meaning that, at very least, some such move is under consideration.

What other inference can be taken from such a statement as that given by the prime minister in his nationally televised interview of last Wednesday?

Having pointed out that servicemen and their families have been disturbed by unification, he admits that their morale has been further weakened by uncertainty as to their future. Then he added:

"If you worked for a big corporation and you were told, well, maybe next year we'll go out of business, or maybe next year we'll cut all operations... you'd be trying to assess where you'd go from here."

It is a state of mind among the service personnel that the prime minister has the grace to admit he regrets.

So should every other practical Canadian.

Surely no sensible politician, however dedicated to economy and to peace, will suggest that this country by an example of disarmament can lead the world towards such an idealistic goal. No people with any sense of responsibility dare shirk the duty of contributing to the preservation of the delicate balance of power between today's ideologically opposed forces.

Canada's admittedly inadequate military establishment exists for no other purpose than to defend the peace. As long as there are nations, such as Communist China, frankly and unashamedly bent on world revolution and domination, none can afford to abandon the means of defence.

Nor is it morally defensible to argue that Canada can safely disarm because some other nation would protect us against aggression. No doubt it is true. But it hardly exempts the Canadian people from the obligation owed our friends and allies, and indeed to other nations whose security is more precarious than ours.

We have a clear duty in this matter. Until such a time as some formula is found by which the sovereignty of all peoples is secure, or until frontiers are abolished and a total world disarmament achieved, Canada must play her proper part as a partner in the democratic association of nations.

Isolationism is an impossible dream. Whether we like it or not, ours is a world of international interdependence, and our task is to keep it at peace, and insofar as we are able, in plenty.

These things are more important than our domestic comforts. If they require some sacrifice, Canadians must be prepared to make them.

Surely Mr. Trudeau is not telling Canada that we should cease to sing with excusable pride "We stand on guard for thee."

Seafront to Save

VICTORIA would have lost one of its greatest charms had residential (or worse, industrial) development been allowed on the sea side of the road from Holland Point along to Clover Point.

A factor in saving the view of the strait and the Olympics, the pleasant place to walk, was the defensive importance of this stretch of seafront in an earlier era. Those too young in years or residence to remember the rifle butts at Clover Point may be surprised to learn that the point is still national defence property, leased to the city until 2046, when another 99-year renewal possibly will be signed.

This of course may depend for one thing on the continued existence of a national defence department in 2046, and the way Prime Minister Trudeau is talking there is some doubt that Canada will have defence forces even in 1976. But it is in connection with this doubt that the Clover Point example is cited.

The Colonist's Mr. Don Gain in an article on Saturday noted that if Canada's armed forces were dissolved, "the future of hundreds of acres of choice Vancouver Island property would be a subject for heated conjecture.... Much of this property is waterfront and in today's market could demand a huge price..."

If and when the time comes for disposal of the undeveloped seafront property, the needs of a greatly enlarged city of the future must certainly be considered. This suggests that the federal government should co-operate in ensuring that areas suitable for recreation, or where development would cut off magnificent views, are preserved for public use. In unorganized territory, the Capital Regional District Board ought to be given first option on them, and on nominal terms.

Bilingual Monster

WHENEVER any new policy is put into effect—whether it be in industry, commerce or government—it is always open to misinterpretation, misunderstanding or even outright abuse.

An outstanding example of this sort of thing is the case of 15 members of the Canadian Corps of Commissionaires who have lost their jobs with the National Museums of Canada because they cannot speak French.

According to the Ottawa newspapers which first reported the government-decided fate of these 15 veterans, their only misdemeanor is that they are not bilingual. All served in the armed forces during wartime, and all have carried out their duties satisfactorily—some for a number of years. But they couldn't speak French.

In defence of the government's policy and the removal of these men from their jobs, Liberal MP Robert Stanbury, parliamentary secretary to the secretary of state, said that the Corps would find other jobs for them somewhere.

Some digging on the part of reporters unearthed a directive circulated in Ottawa that all personnel in the secretary of state's department who meet the public must speak both languages. This was apparently used to deprive the 15 ex-servicemen of their jobs.

Their jobs, however, it was further revealed, did not involve meeting the public. They were employed as security guards to protect museum exhibits. Bilingual guides exist to meet the public and all exhibits and signs are in both French and English.

So the directive really shouldn't have affected them. But it did—and in a disastrous way.

It may well be wondered what kind of bilingual Frankenstein's monster the government is trying to create.

"I'm warning you!"

All Aboard for Peking

Canada's Recognition of Communist China Would Mean Diplomatic Break With Taiwan

By LUBOR J. ZINK from Ottawa

TEMPORARILY stalled on two fronts — partial withdrawal from NATO and emasculation of parliament—the government is pushing ahead with its third pet project: establishment of diplomatic relations with Mao Tse-tung's regime in Peking.

In this area public opinion is deemed to have been sufficiently conditioned not to pose an obstacle.

This judgment seems to be correct. The once-strong opposition to recognition of the Maoist brand of Red Fascism appears to have melted away under the heat of years of pro-Peking propaganda which has by now penetrated even the Sunday schools of the United Church.

The change has come gradually under the combined impact of huge wheat sales to the Peking regime and such spurious but seductive-sounding arguments as "you cannot ignore 700 million people," or the "the UN cannot function properly while excluding the most populous nation in the world from its membership."

The simple facts which make these arguments illogical are that the Peking regime, as the intermittent political and economic upheavals have demonstrated, does not represent the will of the bulk of the population of mainland China and that membership in the world organization is contingent upon acceptance of the basic principles of the UN Charter.

The UN charter makes it abundantly clear that the organization, whose intended purpose is "to maintain international peace and security," is not open to all comers.

It defines the original members as "the states which, having participated in the UN conference on international organization in San Francisco, or having previously signed the declaration by the United Nations of Jan. 1, 1942, sign the present Charter and ratify it" and then declares in Chapter II, Article 4:

"Membership in the UN is open to all other peace-loving states which accept the obligations contained in the present Charter and, in the judgment of the organization, are able and willing to carry out these obligations."

China, under Mao Tse-tung's ghastly dictatorship, has been consistently judged by the majority of UN members as neither peace-loving nor able and willing to carry out the obligations contained in the Charter.

Canada supported this assessment of the Peking regime until three years ago when Lester Pearson's external affairs minister, Paul Martin, declared:

"Canada would have welcomed the opportunity to see Communist China take a seat in the world organization had Peking made this possible ... Peking itself had set a price on participation which is unacceptable.

"In the view of the Canadian government it is not for the UN to accommodate itself to the views of a single nation, however powerful and populous. It is for Communist China to make that accommodation."

Since then there has been no change in the threats to world stability emanating from Peking, but there has been a change in our government's attitude to Mao Tse-tung's bloody tyranny.

In his foreign policy statement during the election campaign, Prime Minister Trudeau said: "We have an economic interest in trade with China ... Our aim will be to recognize the People's Republic of China government as soon as possible and to enable that government to occupy the seat of China in the United Nations, taking into account that there is a separate government in Taiwan."

This course is now being followed, regardless of what the outcome of the general reassessment of our foreign policy in this area may be.

Although the government says it will discuss the whole issue with the new U.S. administration before taking the plunge, its only real problem is the "separate government in Taiwan" which has its embassy in Ottawa.

Since Mao categorically refuses to accept any "two Chines" formula, recognition of the Peking regime would necessitate severance of diplomatic relation with the Republic of China government in Taiwan which, after last month's vote in the general assembly, continues to represent China in the United Nations.

"Will the minister (for external affairs) once and for all give an assurance that whatever is done in this connection ... the people of Taiwan, having stood for freedom in Asia, will not be sacrificed?"

Mitchell Sharp's answer was: "I do not think it would be appropriate at this time to give any such assurances. I just believe that it is a matter that must be considered most seriously in connection with any decision we may make."

Said Diefenbaker: "Without assurances all that means nothing."

More likely, it seems to me, it means that the government is willing to swallow Mao's terms if Peking deigns to respond to Ottawa's overtures.

Portugal's Caetano Moves With Caution Between the Forces of Right and Left

By E. S. CORBETT from London

IF Portugal's opposition front carries out its threat to force Premier Marcello Caetano's hand to speed up liberalization it could split Portugal politically three ways.

As it is, Dr. Caetano's three-month-old government is poised delicately between the extreme Right and the Left, both at the moment paying him lip service. He must tread with caution. Though few will deny he is moving forward, it is the pace that does not please everybody — too slow for some, too fast for others.

But while ex-premier Antonio Salazar still lives, Dr. Caetano must at all costs avoid the risk of plunging the country into turmoil. Dr. Salazar's funeral will be the day of reckoning — an opportunity for the right-wing extremists either to accept defeat or utter a triumphant: "We told you so." Social unrest, riots and agitation could put back the clock to the darkest days of political repression. Most ordinary Portuguese, like people in other countries, want security. The overwhelming re-election of General de Gaulle supported that with fascinating evidence. And Portugal lacks nothing if not militant generals.

But without any fanfares, change in Portugal is in the air. For instance, the exiled Bishop of Oporto, Joaquim Ferreira Gomes, has been seen recently in Portugal. In 1957 he wrote a diocesan letter criticizing Dr. Salazar and the country's social inequality. He was later refused entry into Portugal by PIDE (the political police) following a visit to Spain and had remained there ever since.

There is also a noticeable difference in the government attitude towards student unrest, affecting Portugal as much as elsewhere. Instead of the arbitrary arrests and assaults by armed riot police, which was Salazar's method of suppressing students, the violence now appears to come from the other camp. Portuguese students have broken down university doors, raided a dance at a Lisbon school and shouted insulting slogans at the police.

Agitation has now reached a dangerous pitch, though some of it is petty and illogical. At Lisbon's Technical University 1,400 students petitioned for cheaper meals at the canteen. A subsidy of £750 was offered but the students refused it saying they would rather close the canteen. The sum was doubled and the rector appealed to the students for calm, but violence won the day and the university was closed by the authorities 10 days before the Christmas recess. Meanwhile the government has set up a working group to study university reforms and a judge has been appointed to inquire into the activities of leaders of student associations.

But student agitation is in no way related to the appeal made a few days ago by 239 "Social Democrats" for an acceleration of political reforms which was delivered to Premier Caetano in a thoroughly civilized manner. This is not the first time he has received a plea from an opposition group, but the fact that copies in this case were distributed to the local and foreign press gave it the publicity intended. When Premier Caetano released the opposition leader, Dr. Mario Soares, from exile last month he did not do it with his eyes closed. As the most outspoken of all Dr. Salazar's opponents it was obvious Dr. Soares would waste no time in getting his principles across.

The proposals for reform are not outrageous even if the document carries a hint of blackmail in the form of consequences if decisive steps on liberalization are not taken soon. Prudently no line of conduct is laid down for Portuguese Africa, which is easily the most combustible issue in Portugal today. Reforms deal exclusively with human rights for the Portuguese people.

Topping the list is the call for a press law to substitute censorship — eased but far from abolished under Dr. Caetano. To what extent he will ever go along with this is an open question, since one of the tenets of Portugal's corporate state, of which Dr. Caetano was architect, is that nothing may be published which could damage the state. So far, while inviting free discussion in the press he has drawn the line at printing opposition manifestoes.

Next comes a demand for an amnesty for political prisoners and the reinstatement of students and professors dismissed on political grounds. Men and women are still being arrested and sentenced for subversive activities, four men this month were given a total of six-and-a-half years for being members of the LUAR (League of Revolutionaries). Abolishment is also sought of "security measures" which can mean indefinite imprisonment for political offenders. How many long-term political prisoners there are in Portugal at present is uncertain. PIDE stated recently there are no more than 124, but international organizations place the number as high as 300 or 400.

Finally, a reform of the franchise is called for, aimed at cutting out the "electoral farces" of the past.

For 40 years now, the Portuguese regime, by abuse and intimidation, has ensured that only deputies of confirmed obedience to the government have ever been elected to the National Assembly. Recognized members of the opposition, and persons suspected of radical views were automatically deleted from voters' lists. With the National Assembly elections due to take place next November, the franchise issue is vital.

In fact these elections could either make or break Dr. Marcello Caetano's government. If held within the framework of the law, they could prove conclusively for the first time in 40 years where the political thinking of the majority of the Portuguese people lies.

Realistic Balance

Nigerians Ponder Break With France

By Special Correspondent from Lagos

IS NIGERIA afraid to break diplomatic relations with France? The answer to this intriguing question has agitated the minds of many Nigerians, particularly since the French supply of arms to Biafra became known.

French commercial interests, with their eyes on Nigeria's mineral oil — two-thirds of which is in the former Eastern Region, but all of which is now in areas since captured by the federal side — are alleged to have paid billions of francs to the secessionists in return for the promised mineral rights of the breakaway territory. Furthermore, as a guarantee for the huge amount spent, French interests are also alleged to have supplied the secessionists with men and war materials.

Nigeria has broken relations with France before — in 1961 because that country exploded an atomic bomb in the Sahara Desert. But Nigeria found it a costly decision quite apart from the fact that Lagos was left high and dry by the other African countries, who had also promised retaliation for the French action. It is assumed here that because of Nigeria's desire to become an associate of the European Common Market, it took the initiative in arranging a resumption of diplomatic relations.

Nigeria broke off relations with Tanzania, Zambia, Gabon and The Ivory Coast because those countries, contrary to the decision of the Organization for African Unity, came out openly to give support to the Biafran secessionists by granting the breakaway regime diplomatic recognition. Many Nigerians believe, however, that at least in the case of the two former French countries — Gabon and Ivory Coast — France might be behind their unfriendly acts to Nigeria, just as the Portuguese are using their African territories to transport arms to the secessionists.

There is more to Franco-Nigerian relations than agitators for a diplomatic rupture care to admit. An opinion poll run recently by a widely read Nigerian newspaper on whether or not there should be a break with France showed that a large majority do not think it will be a wise thing to sever diplomatic relations.

Most argued that the time was not ripe for such a break with France, or with any other country for that matter. What was important now was to save Nigeria from disintegrating by crushing the rebellion in the Eastern states.

"This is not the time for paying attention to the antics of old de Gaulle. We will have time for that later," one respondent pointed out. "Our ultimate aim is not only to win the war but also to win the peace. Breaking up diplomatic relations with France now will have only a transient and superficial effect."

A medical practitioner, known for his strong Communist views, dismissed the idea of a break with France because there were also "those who played and continue to play a leading role in the support of the rebels. I have in mind the double face of the British, the solid and consistent support of the United States of America, West Germany, Israel — and the Vatican, all working under the guidance of the invisible government — the CIA," the doctor added.

The question was also put to other Nigerians — university lecturers, an architect, a journalist, two lawyers, a trade unionist and an expert in international affairs. One of the university lecturers said that diplomatic rupture could be effective and serious only between two powerful countries, but "between a weak, young nation and a strong, old-colonial one it can be meaningless as our 1961 attempt showed."

But two or three out of about ten persons asked were not only in favor of retaliation against France by a break in relations, but went further to suggest all French assets in Nigeria be frozen. The exact figure of French assets in Nigeria is not known, but they are believed to run into several millions of pounds. They are largely in commerce, banking, shipping and oil exploration.

Suggested reasons, apart from oil interest, for French involvement in the Nigerian conflict are: General de Gaulle's overt objectives in Africa to extend the "grandeur of France" not only over Biafra but also over Nigeria herself; de Gaulle's dream of the "Great French Empire" that is no more; France's determination to upset Britain's monopoly of Nigeria's market and natural resources.

Nigeria's reaction so far to the alleged French involvement has been a series of public demonstrations by, first, market women, then a section of the workers and lastly, students.

I Beg to Differ . . .

Office Party Revels No Longer Suspect

By FRANK LOWE

DID you realize that so far this year there has not been one single "letter to the editor" calling for the abolition of that devil's masterpiece—the office Christmas party?

Let me tell you, when that happens La Dolce Vite is here and now.

There was a time, before stag movies became works of art and four-letter words the only understandable mode of communication, when the office Christmas party stood for all that was evil.

Little old ladies who had never been invited to an office Christmas party wrote to the editor calling for the abolition of such abominations.

Little young wives who had to stay home while their husbands went to the office Christmas party wrote to the editor saying such gatherings were immoral. However, the wife would usually add, they would be moral and even downright uplifting if the wife could attend.

Clergymen deplored the custom. Girls attending business schools could hardly wait to graduate so they could attend an office Christmas party.

Everyone seemed to be involved.

The office Christmas party, in fact, at one time was so discussed and generally damned that I, for one, began to wonder how I had gone wrong.

I mean, year after year I read about gay flings behind the filing cabinets, and in the mail room, and sub-rosa antics in the executive suite. Yet year after year the office parties I attended failed to live up to these glowing advance billings.

Mind you, there were occasions when I thought some of my fondest dreams might be realized. There was the time, I remember, when the cutest secretary in the office snuggled up to me and said:

"Give me a hug—that'll make Bob notice me."

Then, a few years ago, a beautiful writer batted her long, false eyelashes at me and said in her husky, sexy voice:

"It's so nice to be with you. I adore talking to older men."

The highlight of my office Christmas party career, however, came when I was trapped with a lovely young lady in an elevator.

The young lady began to sob. I put my arm around her comfortingly and said, "Don't be frightened, my dear, we'll get out of here in a little while."

"I know," she said, her tears carving interesting furrows in her make-up, "but by then all the men will be too tight to notice my new dress."

Aside from these titillating moments, though, my office Christmas parties were hardly of a calibre to make one wish to write his memoirs.

Despite this, the letters to the editors kept telling me that if only I could find the right place, an annual orgy—perhaps including girls eating grapes—would be mine.

It was downright frustrating. Until this year, that is.

This year I kept reading my favorite journals in a feverish attempt to discover what was with the office Christmas party. If I couldn't take part in the real thing, I told myself, I could at least live vicariously and sinfully through the letters to the editor.

But there hasn't been a single letter.

This could mean that all those little old ladies and little young wives and clergymen have actually achieved their hearts' desire and been invited to an office Christmas party. And learned that a drink of warm booze from a rapidly disintegrating paper cup doesn't exactly add up to a revel.

Or it could mean that we have become so numbed by what is happening all around us that almost overnight that office Christmas party has changed from an immoral frolic to something as innocent as a Sunday school picnic. At least by comparison.

If this is the case I am disappointed. As long as I was employed I figured that I still had a chance to swing. Some day, somewhere, I would come across an office Christmas party which would sizzle.

But if my suspicions are right—as the lack of letters to the editors would indicate—that most people have discovered that office Christmas parties are pretty tame, then my last hope is gone.

After all, I'm not likely to be invited to a love-in. Not at my age.

Lodge Appointment

Hawkish Stand Predicted At Paris Talks

By ARCH MacKENZIE, from Washington

Henry Cabot Lodge with his hawkish record has been returned to the Vietnam scene by President-elect Nixon to conduct the still-fruitless negotiations at Paris after Jan. 20.

Reaction has been slow and somewhat guarded here as to what the appointment may mean. It seems to confirm that nothing is going to happen at Paris until Nixon takes over.

Nixon has been close-mouthed about the course he will follow in Vietnam, although he gives settlment of the wartop priority.

But the naming of Lodge as chief negotiator leads to speculation that Nixon will follow the firm course laid down by President Johnson in dealing with North Vietnam and actually may toughen the U.S. stand.

The objective would be still more time to strengthen the South Vietnamese regime and expand its control of the countryside, while military forces continued to harry the Viet Cong.

The greatest threat to achieving this objective—or some kind of American "victory" in Vietnam—continues to be reaction to the war in the U.S. War criticism has decreased since Johnson got the war to the conference table but it could flare up again if the conflict continues to grind on without any further progress.

Lodge was in Saigon twice —for the late President Kennedy for 11 months starting in 1963 and then for a second term as ambassador for President Johnson ending in 1967.

The South evidently anticipates an ally if pressure develops in the U.S. for it to make a deal with North Vietnam or, worse from its standpoint, with the Viet Cong in the South.

Bill Moyers, President Johnson's former press secretary and now a newspaper publisher, warns that Lodge "has a very large stake in justifying what has been happening in the last few years."

Senator George Aiken, the respected Vermont Republican, says the choice of Lodge, Nixon's 1960 vice-presidential running mate, to head the negotiations "doesn't increase the chances of any formal agreement at the Paris conference."

Lodge has said many times he expected the war to end with a whimper rather than a bang, perhaps fading away without any clear-cut settlement. He has opposed any "sell-out" of South Vietnam, by forcing them to make concessions to the North or the Viet Cong.

Lodge's statement accepting the Paris job mentioned a need for compromise but Lodge critics want to see just what he means by that word. He has shown no compromise on Vietnam yet.

Two additional appointments give Nixon the equipment to carry on as before, or take a tougher line. One is Ellsworth Bunker, remaining as ambassador to South Vietnam, and Marshall Green, ambassador to Indonesia and regarded as top American diplomatic expert on China.

President Johnson and his other advisers are leaving office, insisting what they did in Vietnam will prove to be right.

Security adviser Walt Rostow, seen as a hard-nosed advocate of the intervention, says the Johnson years have left an "Asia of some promise" because U.S. allies there are stronger now.

"If we are steady and they are steady, the U.S. can gradually fall back . . . into a junior partnership role as they take more and more of their destiny in their hands."

BACKGROUND

Hitler's Propagandists Lead Violent East German Campaign

Ex-Nazi Jew-Baiters at It Again

Former Nazi propagandists are masterminding a violent anti-Jewish campaign in the East German press, TV and radio which rings with catchphrases similar to Hitler's.

By ANTONY TERRY, of The London Sunday Times

The background to the new East German campaign, part of the Russian-sponsored anti-Jewish drive throughout the Communist countries, has been disclosed by Simon Wiesenthal, head of the Jewish Document Centre in Vienna, who helped to track down Adolf Eichmann and bring him to trial in Israel.

Wiesenthal says: "The East Germans do not deny now that at least 39 former Nazi propagandists hold key positions in the state-controlled press and government policy organizations.

"But they explain their Nazi background with its anti-semitic overtones as 'youthful digression' and claim that the former Nazis are now loyally acting in Communist interests."

When Wiesenthal saw a headline in Neues Deutschland, the East German communist party paper, which read "Zionists Take Over Power in Prague," he recalled a similar headline in the Nazi paper Voelkischer Beobachter before Hitler invaded Czechoslovakia in 1939.

He checked and found only one word had been changed. The Nazi headline read "Jews Take Over Power in Prague."

This discovery prompted a detailed research operation in the centre in Vienna which revealed that more than 600 former Nazis hold jobs inside the East German communist regime and its associated organizations, including the communist party in East Berlin.

Among the leading East German propaganda experts is Kurt Blecha, head of the East German government press and information department and director general of the East German government's official news agency ADN.

Blecha was a Nazi party member from 1941 but two years later he was taken prisoner by the Russians and promised loyalty to the Communists.

Kurt Ball, who under Hitler was editor-in-chief of the violently anti-Jewish SS magazine Hammer and wrote for the main SS paper Schwarze Korps on anti-Jewish race theories, is today a leading official in the East German government propaganda office and writes for several East German newspapers.

Horst Dressler-Andress, who today has an advisory post in East Germany's "department of agitation and propaganda" and is a leading theatre producer, was formerly a top official in Goebbel's Nazi propaganda ministry.

Later, during the German occupation of Poland he took charge of propaganda there in an area where there were several Nazi horror camps.

Wiesenthal's list also includes a woman, Mrs. Liselotte Otting, who during the Nazi period helped to organize SS "sex farms" where picked "Nordic women" were paired with SS men as part of Hitler's program to build a master-race.

Today, Mrs. Otting runs the culture and publicity department of the East German Liberal Democrat Party, a small group of non-Communists encouraged by the East German regime to attract the middle-class voter.

Richard Arnold, who is now editor-in-chief of a leading East German daily, applied to join the Nazi party in 1933 when he described himself as being responsible for "removing the last traces of the Jews and their lackeys from German cultural life — science, education and popular enlightenment."

An even more remarkable case of a former Nazi achieving a top position in East Germany is that of Gerhard Kegel, now a leading official of the East German foreign ministry who attends top international diplomatic conferences and is a deputy editor of the East German communist party newspaper.

Kegel was a Gestapo informer operating from the German embassy in Poland before the war and later wrote a Nazi treatise on "race purity."

In Czechoslovakia the disclosures made in Wiesenthal's report have increased deep public distrust of the East German regime and its leader, Walter Ulbricht.

One of the reasons for the Russian demand for the removal of the leader of the national assembly, Josef Smrkovsky, is that he read extracts of the report in the Czech parliament recently.

Announce New Healing Substance... Shrinks Piles, Checks Itch

Exclusive healing substance proven to shrink hemorrhoids...and repair damaged tissue.

A renowned research institute has found a unique healing substance with the ability to shrink hemorrhoids painlessly. It relieves itching and discomfort in minutes and speeds up healing of the injured, inflamed tissues.

One hemorrhoidal case history after another reported "very striking improvement." Pain was promptly and gently relieved . . . actual reduction or retraction (shrinking) took place.

Among these case histories were a variety of hemorrhoidal conditions. Relief even occurred in cases of long standing, and most important of all, results were so thorough that this improvement was maintained over a period of many months.

This was accomplished with a new healing substance (Bio-Dyne) which quickly helps heal injured cells and stimulates growth of new tissue. Bio-Dyne is offered in ointment and suppository form called Preparation H.

In addition to actually shrinking hemorrhoids, Preparation H lubricates and makes elimination less painful. It helps prevent infection which is a principal cause of hemorrhoids.

Just ask your druggist for Preparation H Suppositories or Preparation H Ointment (with a special applicator).

Let the Cauldron Simmer

By JOSEPH KRAFT, from Washington

Spurred by an initiative from Moscow, Washington, Paris, and London are now bestirring themselves about the Middle East. And tension between Israel and the Arab states has been so prolific of troubles that it is hard not to sympathize with any effort at settlement.

But is this really a good time for such an effort? Wouldn't it make sense to live with the problem a little while longer in the hope that conditions more favorable to settlement may soon come round?

The case for living with the problem depends on the present condition of the two chief troublemakers in the area. Both are in difficulty now, and both have time working against them.

One, of course, is Colonel Nasser. He is among the last of the heroic leaders thrown up in the decade of the '50s by the underdeveloped countries emerging from colonial tutelage.

Like most exponents of the heroic style, he has battened on tension and confrontation.

In particular, he has been on the offensive against other leaders in other Arab states — whether Jordan, Libya, Tunisia, Saudi Arabia, Kuwait, or Iraq — who showed any sign of moderation toward Israel.

Now even those who once held out hope for Nasser's "realism" must wonder whether any settlement can be achieved as long as he is in power.

As it happens, Nasser is currently on the ropes. His heroic boasts were mocked by the performance of his troops during the six-day war in June 1967. Economic pressures building ever since have weakened him further.

Outside Egypt he has no following. Inside Egypt there have been serious demonstrations against the regime by student groups and evident unrest in the army. But a move toward settlement now might well save the regime.

The other main troublemaker in the area is the Soviet Union. As a great power, to be sure, Russia is bound to be concerned with the Middle East and to want a voice in its affairs — more of a voice than she was conceded by the Western Big Three before 1955.

But since the 1955 breakthrough, the Russians have behaved in a crude and irresponsible manner. They have allowed public affairs in their client state of Syria to sink into chaos.

They spread about the gasoline that led to the six-day war. And they have followed up by putting more arms and soldiers into the Middle East while avoiding any move toward an agreed embargo with the western nations.

Now the Russuans are in danger of being made to pay for their past mistakes. Their only asset in the Middle East is Colonel Nasser. With his star waning, he and his supporters are pressing the Russians to make good on their claim to be the shield of Araby.

That is why the Russians are suddenly talking up the Middle East in Washington, Paris, London, and in the United Nations. That is why Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko dashes suddenly to Cairo and leaves behind planted, though scarcely credible, stories that he came to head off a threatened Egyptian invasion of Isreal. The fact is that the Russians are whipping up a climate of apprehension in order to justify the kind of effort toward settlement they need to shore up their own deteriorating position.

To be sure, even the continuance of Colonel Nasser and Soviet influence would be a cheap price for a true settlement between Israel and the Arab states. But there is no sign that anything like a genuine accord is anywhere near.

The latest Soviet proposals emphasize Israeli withdrawal from positions occupied in the six-day war without any settlement of the border questions with Jordan and Syria, not to mention the little matter of secure passage through the Suez Canal and the Gulf of Aqaba.

No Israeli government could accept such terms — least of all the present regime which is due to face the electorate this year.

Nor is the United States in good posture to be doing major Middle Eastern business. The Johnson administration has not cleared its recent moves — including the decision to send Phantom jets to Israel this year — with the incoming administration.

In this situation, there is a case for an extra measure of sangfroid. Certainly, if the Israelis who are on the firing line can live with the problem a little longer, there is no good reason for the heat to become suddenly unbearable for Washington.

Whisky "experts" are startled by B.C. Double Distilled

People who have been around a lot, and claim to really know whisky value, often do a "double take" when they taste B.C. Double Distilled for the first time. What startles them is that a locally-produced whisky can taste so good. Mellow, rich and satisfying, with a flavor that has pleased British Columbians since 1908. That's Double Distilled. Don't make your final judgement on whisky until you've tried it. B.C. DOUBLE DISTILLED

President Robert Unrecognized at UN

The Miniest State of All

By EARL FOELL, from United Nations

Anyone who saw the movie The Mouse That Roared will grasp the scene that occurred when the president of Nauru came to call on the United Nations Monday.

A small crowd was on hand in the lobby. Two men had lingered when they heard a UN guard say "Nehru" was coming. (Well, Nauru—pronounced "Now-roo"—Does sound a bit like the name of the late Indian prime minister.) Several young stenographers stopped on their way out to lunch when they overheard someone state that "the president" was arriving at any moment.

A long black Cadillac rolled up. Out stepped a short, swarthy, smiling man, his wife, and an Australian escort. None of the watchers, schooled by newspaper and TV photos to know countless heads of state, recognized this one.

President Hammer de Robert is head of probably the smallest fully-independent state in the world. Not small in size, mind you. Nauru has eight square miles of island territory in the mid-Pacific—which makes is a veritable superpower compared to Monaco (370 acres). But in population, Nauru brings up the rear of full-fleged states. According to de Robert, it has about 3,500 citizens.

That puts it well below the Maldive Islands Republic—the smallest UN member state, with some 95,000 people. Monaco, which has UN observer status, has some 20,000. Andorra, has well over 5,200 citizens. San Marino and Liechenstein each weigh in at about 14,000. Such other microstates as Sark, Swat, Punial, Hunza, and Gilgit are all absorbed in some larger authority that clouds their independence.

So Nauru can claim to be the miniest of the ministates.

It can also point to other contributions to the history of nations:

Only four years ago, before independence, its citizens wanted to trade in their island for a new one.

This might seem odd, at first glance, because Nauru is practically pure phosphate ore. It is estimated the 3,658 of its 5,263 acres are phosphate-bearing. Annual income from ore exports runs to about $10,000,000.

But Nauruans complained that they did not control their own chief industry, and that besides it was quarrying their island right out of existence. The desolate holes left by mining weren't fit for any kind of livelihood.

Australia, which has been administering the island jointly with Britain and New Zealand, refusing to give the Nauruans one of two islands they wanted in trade. But the administering powers did give Nauru independence in 1967.

De Robert converted from chief to president. Nauru made history, of sorts, by deciding not to joint the UN. UN members breathed a sigh of relief at this, since they were worrying about the UN's population explosion of ministates. They promptly passed a resolution in gratitude which told all states to respect the independence of Nauru even if it wasn't a UN member.

So it was natural for de Robert to return to the scene of this triumph as head of state—even if the UN stenographers didn't recognize him.

Oh Those Calls!

Fisticuffs Stopped Over Thaw Problem

In the wake of Greater Victoria's recent unusually heavy snowfalls, Saanich police bulletins reflected the thawing aftermath with some rather unusual complaints phoned in.

Shortly after 4 p.m. Saturday, a Saanich resident called for police assistance because he feared a fight was about to take place.

Two constables rushed to the scene. They later reported the trouble was between two neighbors, fighting over a pile of snow between their driveways. Their report ended, "trouble settled on our departure."

Just after midnight Sunday morning, an irate motorist called to complain of a pothole on Tattersall.

He said he had blown a tire when he hit the hole and feared further damage to his car's underbody.

He told the policeman on the switchboard that he thought the municipality should reimburse him for damages.

His call was referred to the public works yard, which at the time was attending to nearly 100 complaints of flooding caused by melting snow.

At least one weekend celebrant realized the dangers of walking in the ice and slush, as evidenced by a Shelbourne Street resident's call at 5:23 a.m. Sunday to report "a drunk crawling up my front steps."

Three constables attended and took the man to his home some blocks away. They ended their report with the fact that he was "suffering from overindulgence in milk."

Metro Stands Firm On Burning Issue

Metropolitan Board of Health officials insisted Monday they have the power to enforce a ban on the burning of refuse at Greater Victoria garbage dumps.

But they are not hurrying into a showdown with the dump operators, who claim garbage disposal is not the concern of the health board.

Dr. J. L. M. Whitbread, health officer, said he intends to tell dump operators "sometime this week" that new health board regulations must be obeyed and, if anyone questions his power to do so, "they ought to take a look at provincial statutes."

Dr. Whitbread said he was not perturbed that garbage was still being burned at some dumps beyond the Jan. 1 deadline that the board imposed.

For one thing, he said, garbage fires smoulder for a long time and cannot be extinguished overnight.

The threat to continue burning was made last week by garbage dump operators who claimed their operations were under the control of the Pollution Control Board, a provincial authority, rather than the metropolitan health board.

Plumbers Not Caught Up

Freeze Effects Still Felt

The loose ends of Victoria's third-worst snowstorm and worst-ever freeze are still dangling.

High on the list of troubles is the general plumber's nightmare caused by the near-zero temperatures of Christmas week. Calls were still coming in Monday from people who only then were able to pin down an interview time with the plumber.

One firm expected to be hard at it seven days from now. It was still about two dozen calls behind.

SNOW AGAIN?

Meanwhile, the weatherman predicted light snow mixed with rain overnight, with some areas receiving temperatures very close to freezing. But the last few days of mild weather warmed the earth sufficiently that icy roads are unlikely, says the weather office.

Most city streets were clear of the large banks of snow that reduced them to two-lane thoroughfares for more than a week, but the big melt was still being felt Monday.

Victoria engineer's office reported no problems but Saanich enginner Neville Life said Hyacinth Road near Marigold was closed to traffic because of flooding.

Oak Bay public works crews attended to seven or eight calls, according to engineer Geoffry White, after complaints of wet basements and gardens.

Esquimalt was back onto routine maintenance.

Broken roads and potholes were numerous, though none was believed to be too serious.

Heavy fog at Vancouver added airline confusion over the weekend.

Everything was "routine" again Monday after several flights were diverted to Patricia Bay Airport Saturday and Sunday.

Several Air Canada DC-9 and DC-7 aircraft landed here from cross-Canada flights, as well as a Calgary-based Great Northern Airlines F-27.

Comox's long air force runway was the recipient of several larger planes, taking a Boeing 707 and a 737, a DC-8 and a Convair in the emergency.

PLANES DIVERTED

CPA reported its flights from the Orient to Vancouver Sunday were diverted to Calgary. Some Air Canada overseas flights also landed at Calgary and Edmonton.

Some Island logging crews which had expected to get back to work Monday were halted by snow-clogged roads.

The Nanaimo Lakes and Copper Canyon operations were closed, according to a MacMillan Bloedel spokesman. Snow still falling in the Shawnigan area could force another shutdown there and at the Northwest Bay site.

The Crofton pulp and paper mill's regular maintenance shutdown was extended because of some frozen, broken water pipes.

For Pedestrians

Safety Reflected In New Material

Whether sewn, ironed or stuck on, the new retro-reflective materials mean greater safety for pedestrians at night, John Reeves of the greater Victoria Safety Council said Monday.

The council is promoting use of the reflective material as part of its pedestrian safety program, "See and Be Seen."

The council has assembled a display of various ways the materials, which shine brilliantly in a headlight beam, can be attached to clothes and articles to make the pedestrian more visible in the dark.

The tape variety of reflective material can be stuck to articles like purses, safety hats, umbrellas, canes and lunch pails. It can be found in automobile supply stores.

The other two types, one a tape which can be ironed onto clothing and the other which is sewn on, are sold in major department stores, Mr. Reeves said.

Amputee's Chums Retaliate

Neighbor's Note Inspires Reprisals

NEW PORT RICHEY, Fla. (AP)—Schoolmates of Thomas Crittenden, who lost a leg in a car wreck, stood accused Monday of burning crosses on the lawns of Crittenden's neighbors in an apparent reprisal to a poison-pen letter that said: "Sad he survived."

Wilbs Jean Crittenden, the Gulf High School football star's widowed mother, found the note when she returned from the hospital where her son's left leg was amputated. He was hurt when his car crashed into a tree Christmas morning.

"We are sorry he survived, for eventually he's going to kill an innocent with his damn fool driving," the note said. "Nuff said. Lucky it was just him and not a car full of innocents or a Floramar child."

Mrs. Crittenden said the carefully printed message was on the margin over a newspaper picture of her 18-year-old son's wrecked car. She said the note apparently came from a neighbor.

Early Sunday, police said, cars full of youths raced up and down the street on which the Crittendens live. They hurled gasoline-soaked wooden crosses about 18 inches high onto lawns of homes in the neighborhood, Deputy Sheriff J. F. Gallian said.

Gallian called for help and rounded up 35 youths. Three girls and six boys were charged with unlawful assembly. Two were released to their parents' custody and the other seven were released on $100 bond each.

Sidney Plans to Separate Storm Drains, Sewers

Legislation will be introduced in Sidney this year to prevent surface water running into the sewers, Mayor Arthur Freeman told council in his inaugural address, Monday night.

"It has been indicated that Sidney's sewer system is inadequate. I have been assured this is not so," he said.

DRAINS INADEQUATE

"In fact the system at present installed is capable of providing facilities for 6,000 people.

"The problem we are faced with is that we have an inadequate storm drainage system.

"Over the years surface water has been permitted to enter the sewer system and at this time of year accounts for almost 60 per cent of the volume in the sewers," he pointed out.

"This practice has to stop.

"It is intended that legislation will be introduced this year to make it mandatory for all surface drains to be taken out of sewers and directed to the storm drainage system.

"Also in the interest of homeowners and to improve the situation, legislation will be introduced that will not permit developers to construct homes below a certain level."

The mayor also anticipated the initial planning and possibly the start of the development of a Northern Peninsula hospital during the year.

He also held out hopes for developments towards a senior citizens complex within the municipality, and anticipated the building of a commercial indoor swimming pool.

OUT OF HANDS

Mayor Freeman said he is convinced that taxes cannot stay at their present level, and pointed out that the main items on the tax bill — schools, health and welfare, regional district and regional hospitals — are out of the hands of council.

The mayor reported an 80 per cent increase in building permits in 1968 over the previous year, with a value of almost $3,000,000. Change of title and sale of property had shown a 27 per cent increase, a figure which he said could have been higher had council not recognized the danger of development without planning.

Emergency Service Will Be Continued

Sidney and North Saanich volunteer fire department issued assurances Monday night that there will be both fire and ambulance service while legal implications of their claim to the assets of the fire department are being studied.

"We note with interest that North Saanich municipality will be seeking legal advice to test the validity of the bylaw in question," president Bill Atkinson said.

"We are confidently awaiting the outcome of legal proceedings.

"Meanwhile we will continue both fire and ambulance service."

Bunn's Successor

School Board Elects Jameson Chairman

Dr. Carron Jameson was unanimously elected chairman of the Greater Victoria School Board at its 1969 inaugural meeting Monday.

The Oak Bay dentist succeeds Peter Bunn, who has held the chair for the past two years.

SIX YEARS

Dr. Jameson has been a trustee for six years, and was re-elected in December. He was nominated and seconded for the chairmanship by Peter Bunn and John Porteous.

Dr. Jameson welcomed new trustee Allan McKinnon to his first board meeting. Mr. McKinnon, 1760 Rockland, is a Victoria businessman who also teaches in Sooke school district.

"We'll give you lots and lots to do," Dr. Jameson promised.

IMPORTANT ROLE

Dr. Jameson said in an interview that he saw his role as chairman as important in "continuing the modernization of education in this district.

"Ideally we should encourage humanity in all our relationships with children," said Dr. Jameson. "'Humanity' takes in everything. It's doing the best for the child in all areas."

Committees for the coming year will be struck at the board's regular meeting Jan. 20.

ALL TRUSTEES

A change this year will be creation of an expanded education committee including all trustees. The education committee formulates major education policy decisions.

Board committees normally hold closed meetings.

Victorian Accused

First Charge Laid Over STP Drug

A drug charge which local RCMP officials say is the first involving STP laid in Victoria, was one of three charges read Monday in Central Magistrate's Court to David Laws, 20, of 516 Dallas Road.

He is charged with selling the substance, and Sgt. Lew Dempsey of RCMP E Division said this was the first time such a charge had been laid locally, but added that the drug had been involved in previous cases here.

Laws is also charged with trafficking in cannabis resin, commonly called hashish, and trafficking in marijuana.

Defence counsel Cal Becker asked that his client be remanded to Monday without election of method of trial to give time for consideration of the charges. Magistrate J. A. Byers granted the remand and bail was continued at $2,000.

Sgt. Dempsey said Monday that Laws was charged following a November police action when flying squads made arrests based on activities of an undercover RCMP agent who lived as a hippie.

Constable Mike Onischuk, 20, came out of his undercover role in late November, and 19 youths appeared in courts Nov. 26 to face drug charges.

Paymaster Barclay Dead at 80

Funeral service will be held today for William E. A. Barclay, 80, a resident of Victoria for 60 years and long-time paymaster at Yarrows Ltd.

Mr. Barclay, of 2040 Frederick Norris Road, died Sunday after a lengthy illness.

The 1:30 p.m. funeral service in St. Paul's Naval and Garrison Church in Esquimalt will be conducted from an oak pulpit which Mr. Barclay carved after the Second World War. Rev. J. A. Roberts will officiate.

When he came to Victoria from England before the First World War, Mr. Barclay joined the B.C. Marine Railway Shipyard. Later, when the firm was taken over by Yarrows, Mr. Barclay rose from timekeeper to chief paymaster. During the war he was responsible for paying nearly 4,000 workers.

Mr. Barclay is survived by a son, William, in Victoria, and two grandsons.

Credo

Each member of the Order of the Golden Rule must have and maintain high ethical standards in both his personal and his professional activities.

This Code of Ethics proudly sets forth the concepts to which each member must conform.

I Believe that my calling is one of dignity and importance. I am proud to be a funeral director.

that my relationship with those I serve is a sacredly confidential one and that my personal information which may be imparted to me, or which I may in any way acquire in the performance of my professional duties, must be regarded as inviolable.

that by uniting, members of the Order of the Golden Rule can better serve the public because each member shares with all other members those experiences which have enabled him to improve his service.

that the quality of my service must be the same for the rich and the poor; all who turn to me for help in time of need desire and will receive the most comforting, helpful and considerate service of which I am capable.

that a funeral director who is authorized to display the Symbol of the Order may be called by any family, even those who do not know him, with the complete assurance that he will provide a dignified, respectable funeral regardless of monetary consideration.

that the principle of the Golden Rule is the finest and most comprehensive guide that a man may have in all his dealings with his fellows; I believe in, and practice, the pledge given to the public by all members of the Order: to provide, always,

"Service Measured Not by GOLD, but by The GOLDEN RULE"

Toronto Prices Slip As New York Plunges

TORONTO (CP) — The market posted its sharpest drop in any day since February in active trading.

The industrial index fell 2.21 to 188.57 and the western oil index 6.79 to 241.17. The declining trend developed after midday in response to the big price slide in New York.

The weakest industrial groups were industrial mines, real estate stocks, steels, pipelines, construction stocks and beverages.

Weldwood fell 2 to 25, Noranda 1⅞ to 33⅛, Canadian Goldale 1½ to 31 and Canadian Industrial Gas 1¼ to 23½.

Among the heaviest traders, Inco lost 1⅛ to 41⅛ and Toromont Industrial 20 cents to $3.60. OSF Industries gained ⅝ to 29.

Golds edged up. Dome was up 1½ to 79½ and Giant Yellowknife ¼ to 14.

Among western oils, Dome Pete dropped 3 to 88, Asamera 2⅛ to 24⅛ and Home A 1½ to 39.

Alcan, Bell Canada, B.C. Forest and Cominco all slid ⅛ to 29, 46½, 30⅛ and 35⅝.

Royal Bank, Canadian Imperial Bank, Bank of Commerce and Bank of Nova Scotia slid ⅛ to 26⅝, 22⅝ and 26⅝.

Forest Issues Rise

VANCOUVER—B.C. forest industry stocks provided a firm front in a day of weakening prices.

Scott Paper rose 2¼ to 31½ and MacMillan Bloedel was up ⅝ at 29⅝. Doman was again in demand with the common at 15.

Marshall Creek was a big loser in mines, dropping .21 to .37 while Copper Ridge was off .23 at 1.95. Buttle rose .40 to 5.40 and Bethex rose .35 to 3.30. In the oils Stampede added 1 at 10¼.

Papers Fare Best

MONTREAL (CP) — All sectors except papers declined as the trading day wore on and senior mines and oils posted the heaviest losses.

Dome Pete fell 5⅝ to 86, Home B 3⅝ to 39¼, Home A 2 to 39 and Noranda 1⅝ to 33⅛. Inco declined 1⅞ to 41 and French Petrol 10 cents to $8.20.

Wall St. Wilts

NEW YORK (AP) — The market took one of its sharpest losses of recent years.

For the Dow Jones industrial average of 30 blue chips, it was the sharpest loss since the outbreak of the Arab-Israeli war June 5, 1967, when the average fell 15.54 points. The Monday loss was 15.23 at 936.66.

The loss was not so dramatic for The Associated Press average of 60 stocks, which dropped 3.7 to 354.6. For the AP average, it was the worst loss since last July 22, when it dropped 5.4.

The day's selling was linked with a resumption of concern over high interest rates and tight money, the possibility of further monetary and fiscal restraints to cool an inflated economy, and worry over the Arab-Israeli crisis.

The market was mixed at the start, then headed lower, widening its loss hour by hour. The ticker tape was four minutes late at the close.

IBM dropped 9⅛ to 302½ as it reacted to another civil antitrust suit, this one by Data Processing Financial and General Corp.

B.C. Tel Plans New Share Issue

B.C. Telephone plans to issue 287,700 new common shares next month for distribution in the form of rights to its existing shareholders.

Application for authority to make the issue has been filed by B.C. Tel with the Canadian transport commission which will hold a public hearing Feb. 11.

The hearing will determine whether the new issue is in the public interest and the price at which the new $25 par shares will be offered.

BC Tel says it hopes to divide the shares among shareholders of record Feb. 19 on the basis of one new share of each nine shares held. The offer will expire March 26.

The company has 2,589,300 shares outstanding, with many of its shareholders resident in B.C.

It will be the eighth rights offering by B.C. telephone since 1953. The last was in 1965 when shareholders were given rights to subscribe on the basis of one new share for eight shares held at a price of $57.

BC Tel says it needs $70,000,000 to finance its 1969 capital expenditures including 64,800 new phones.

TAKE YOUR PICK

Dr. Franz Pick, the new York currency expert and councillor, hasn't much of an opinion of the money hoarders.

His dictum is that money is created only to be devalued and expropriated and that the current monetary upheaval will end in a worldwide devaluation of currencies.

To his clients who are willing to listen Pick's investment advice is to buy precious metals like gold, silver and palladium, and art by the Jackson Pollocks, French impressionists and signed 18th century French furniture.

What not to buy, according to Pick, are U.S. government bonds "certificates of guaranteed confiscation," and/or money in savings accounts which is for "suckers" who will be paid back in "monkey money."

So there you are.

TAX REFORM DELAY

Canadians will have to wait another six months or so before they know what the country's new taxation setup is going to be.

Finance Minister Benson, who had promised to have the new setup ready for presentation to the Commons in March says it won't be possible before June.

The news was given during an address to the Canadian Club in Toronto in which the minister admitted the drafting of the new act was a lot tougher than he had imagined.

What Canadians don't know yet is how much of Carter (including capital gains tax) is going to be included in the reform.

RECEIVER APPOINTED

Canada Trust-Huron and Erie has appointed John Nation of Ismay, Bolston and Dunn, chartered accountants, to act as receiver on behalf of the debenture holders of Atlas Chain Co. Ltd.

The company stopped production Dec. 23, when its 30 employees were laid off.

Shareholders are to be informed later this week by Atlas Chain management of the reasons for the closure of the plant.

DAMP SQUIB ENDING

Canada's sagging bond market sputtered out of 1968 like a damp squib.

McLeod Young Weir and Co. reports that the yield on its 40 selected Canadian bonds was at an all time high of 8.10 per cent at yearend. This was up from 7.91 per cent at the end of November and from 7.29 per cent at the end of 1967.

RATES INCREASED

City Savings and Trust has announced it will pay 8 per cent interest on deposits of $20,000 and over for a period of not less than five years.

The company offers to pay 7½ per cent and 7¾ per cent for smaller sums over the same period. City Savings says it believes the larger depositor should receive additional interest earnings and is thus grading its rates on size as well as term.

STRONG FINISH

Trans Mountain Oil Pipe Line ended 1968 on a strong note with deliveries of petroleum products averaging 303,089 barrels a day for the month, up from 271,884 barrels in the corresponding month of 1967.

However, the overall total for 1968 was lower than in the previous year at 263,074 barrels a day, compared with 271,884 barrels in 1967 when deliveries were boosted because of the Israel-Arab war and the closure of the Suez Canal.

Trans Mountain expects to handle 261,000 barrels a day through the system in January.

CANADAIR DIVERSIFIED

Canadair of Montreal is making an offer to buy 1,000,000 common shares of Asbestos Corp. at $30 a share.

The company, a subsidiary of General Dynamics, a U.S. arms firm, already owns 300,010 common shares of Asbestos and the additional purchase would give it 54 per cent of the outstanding common stock.

DEAL COMPLETED

Alcan Aluminum Ltd. reports that its U.S. fabricating subsidiary, Alcan Aluminum Corp. has completed the purchase of Metal Goods Corp. of St. Louis, Miss.

Holders of Metal Goods shares will receive 11 Alcan common shares for each 10 Metal Goods shares while another 9,120 Alcan shares have been reserved to meet stock options. The deal will increase Alcan's outstanding shares by 663,927 common shares.

Victoria Paint Firm Expands to Calgary

By HARRY YOUNG

Victoria's only independent paint manufacturing company in on the move. It is about to open a branch plant in Calgary.

Empress Paint Manufacturing of Market Street, is taking the step as a move to widen its marketing sphere, and Dick Smith, president, and Keith Doughty, vice-president, are leaving at the weekend for Calgary where they hope to get their new plant in production by the end of January.

Formed four years ago, as a partnership between Smith and Doughty, Empress Paint has developed into the city's fastest growing manufacturing company.

"We have chosen Calgary for our second plant because that city does not have a paint manufacturing business," said Mr. Doughty. "The opening there will not affect our Victoria operations but will be used to concentrate on the prairie market."

Empress Paint has retail and wholesale stores in Victoria, Sidney and Nanaimo and is planning two more outlets in Langford and Duncan. It also has a dealer in Port Alberni.

Starting from scratch four years ago, Empress Paint now employs 15 persons in Victoria and manufactures all types of paint material.

Giant Gets Too Noisy

Jumbo Mufflers Proposed

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The U.S. Federal Aviation Administration Monday proposed a set of tough noise standards designed to muffle the "escalation of aircraft noise" around U.S. airports.

The new rules were aimed specifically at the new jetliners being planned, including the huge jumbo jets that will carry more than 400 passengers.

According to the FAA, the proposed standards would cut the noise level of all new jets by an "amount substantially below" that of the noisiest comparable jetliner now in service. For example, the new 490-passenger Boeing 747 jumbo jet would not be as noisy as the commonly-used Boeing 707 jetliner.

To conform to the new rules, a spokesman for the FAA said the airlines would have to make full use of both the new specially-designed "quiet engines" and noise supression devices.

The spokesman said it was not technologically feasible to enforce the anti-noise innovations on all types of older aircraft. But he said the FAA still was studying the possibility that they had some "relevancy" to older airliners.

The FAA said it also is considering enforcing the rules for supersonic airliners, helicopters and short take off and landing aircraft.

Under the FAA's rule-making procedure, the deadline for filing comments on the standards is March 12. When the comments are received, the FAA will hold a public hearing, and then issue a final decision.

The FAA noted its proposal is not designed as substitute for noise abatement regulations now in use at airports. Nor is it designed to upset the present division of responsibility for noise control now shared by the federal, local and state authorities, a spokesman said.

Student Probe

Consumer Aid Labelled Farce

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A band of student investigators, recruited by critic Ralph Nader, blasted the U.S. Federal Trade Commission Sunday as a home for political hacks and a farce as a consumer protector.

The seven students said they conducted an investigation last summer, without pay, by talking to "selected high level personnel" in the FTC and others outside the commission as well.

Nader, who released their report on the investigation, described it as exclusively the product of the students, and not his own doing. He conceded, however, that he organized the investigation.

DINNER TICKETS

The 185-page report called for the resignation of FTC chairman Paul Rand Dixon, who it said had "degraded and ossified" the agency. It also claimed FTC personnel were demoralized by a system under which Dixon "personally asks his subordinates to buy $100-a-plate tickets to democratic fund raising dinners."

The student report claimed that, out of nearly 500 lawyers working for the commission, only about 40 are Republicans. It said "most attorneys at the FTC are labelled as either Democrats or Republicans and their party affiliation has a definite impact on the positions they are offered."

ONE REPUBLICAN

"Only one Republican holds a position of any prominence in the operating bureaus of the FTC," the report said.

The students also said they uncovered an unpublished Civil Service Commission report which showed the number of cases handled by the FTC was drastically decreasing, amid a rising chorus of consumer protests.

Pilotage Change Proposed

VANCOUVER (CP) — The second part of a royal commission on pilotage has recommended that all pilotage of ships in the Fraser River, the Gulf of Georgia and the B.C. north coast be classified a public service.

Under this classification pilots serving in those waters would become employees of a proposed Crown corporation and lose their present quasi-co-operative status.

RETIRED EXECUTIVE

Copies of the report, dated Oct. 1, 1968, were released during the weekend by commissioner Harold Renwich of Vancouver, a retired lumber executive.

Under the present system, pilotage in B.C. is administered by the British Columbia Pilotage District, serving the Fraser. Pilots guide ships in and out of harbors and anchorages.

Coast pilots are organized into a corporation and are paid equal shares out of a general pool of revenues from pilotage tariffs administered by the district authority.

Fatality Leads to Fine

A hunting accident Sept. 18 on Little Island Lake near Fort St. James, which resulted in death for a 59-year-old man, brought a $75 fine Monday for David Wigmore, 39, of 836 Darwin, before Magistrate J. A. Byers in Central Magistrate's Court.

Wigmore's defence attorney earlier entered a guilty plea to violation of the small vessels regulations, and a detailed report of the incident was ordered by the court.

The two men were forced to abandon Wigmore's eight - foot dinghy when a gun was accidentally discharged through its hull, Prosecutor Peter Burkett told court.

HEART ATTACK

He said an autopsy report showed the victim died of a heart attack, brought on by exposure and excessive physical exertion. The boat sank in eight feet of water about 150 feet from shore, and the two men, both non-swimmers, had to make their way ashore without help because there were no lifejackets aboard, he said.

Magistrate Byers imposed the fine and said the victim's death was directly caused by Wigmore's failure to have lifejackets in the boat.

Sentencing of two young English seamen who pleaded guilty Thursday to a mischief charge, arising from their damaging engine room equipment aboard the Ss. Hartmattan, was adjourned Monday to today.

A report on the extent of damage was not available. The ship was able to sail Friday night.

The two junior engineers charged, John B. Mulligan. 23, and Graham A. Liddell, 21, both of Lancashire, are being held in custody by city police.

Two women who pleaded guilty to shoplifting in separate incidents, were told by Magistrate Byers that they had escaped being held in jail only because one had children at home and the other was of advanced age.

Rita Coltura, 36, of 555 Whiteside, pleaded guilty to theft under $50, involving groceries taken Dec. 19 from The Bay.

NO EXPLANATION

Asked for an explanation of her theft, Mrs. Coltura told the magistrate, "I don't understand it myself."

Magistrate Byers told her that only because she had three children at home, he would not remand her in custody in jail, and ordered a presentence report for Jan. 13.

Magistrate Byers also ordered a presentence report for Jan. 13 on Mrs. Ivonne Travers, 79, of 791 Pandora, after she pleaded guilty through a French-speaking interpreter to theft under $50.

The assistant manager of the Metropolitan Store, 1220 Douglas, told court he apprehended Mrs. Travers Dec. 18, as she left the store with silverware he had seen her take.

Items found in her bag which she hadn't paid for included: a man's shirt, two pairs of sheets, a Christmas cake, four candy bars, a monkey wrench, two knives and eight forks. He said she had about $22 in her purse. Value of the stolen goods totalled $15.11.

Her interpreter told court Mrs. Travers roomed with him and said, "She doesn't need that stuff." He said she had heart trouble and took "strong pills," which made her dizzy.

Magistrate Byers said Mrs. Travers was "a bit too old to be remanded in custody, I think," and released her in her own recognizance.

Leonard J. James, 30, of 2718 Rock Bay, and Teresa Esquilbie, 34, of 1260 Goldstream, were fined $15 each after pleading guilty to causing a disturbance by being drunk, in separate incidents Saturday evening.

Fined $35 each after pleading guilty to being minors in possession of liquor were Walter Carvalho, 20, of 832 Esquimalt Road; Rovert A. Malcolm, 18, of CFB Esquimalt; Robert K. Matthews, 19, of 1427 Gladstone, and George R. Sheridan, 20, of 123 Lurline.

Gains Ground in Revenue

Province's Tourist Revenue Up 10 Per Cent During '68

The provincial department of travel industry Monday released its official estimates of tourist revenues for British Columbia which showed a 10 per cent increase in 1968.

Recreation Minister Kenneth Kiernan announced tourism was worth $345,844,560 last year, compared with $317,300,000 in 1967.

The tourist industry continued to gain ground on the mines and petroleum which now holds second spot to forestry as the province's biggest money spinner. The latest estimate of mineral production for B.C. is $402,000,000 — up four per cent.

NOT YET TALLIED

Forestry revenues, which haven't yet been tallied for 1968, are expected to go well over the $1,000,000,000-mark.

Mr. Kiernan said an estimated 9,265,473 tourist visits were made to the province last year. Automobile travel was up 8.6 per cent and visitors coming here by public carrier increased 6.5 per cent.

IN FROM ALBERTA

Border crossing statistics, obtained from the Dominion Bureau of Statistics, showed some 3,026,922 Americans travelled to B.C. by automobile. They are estimated to have spent $121,076,880.

Another 787,000 Americans entering the province by car from Alberta produced another $31,480,000, while a further 435,636 U.S. visitors travelling by public carriers contributed $17,425,440.

Mr. Kiernan said about 2,538,479 out-of-province Canadians left $101,539,160 in this province and British Columbians holidaying at home spent an estimated $74,323,080.

The growth in tourism was ascribed by Mr. Kiernan to several factors, the major ones being concentrated promotions abroad and a campaign to lengthen the tourist season in the province.

The minister added: "Otherwise the splendid co-operation of transport organizations and the warm-hearted attitude of our own citizens played a very significant role in setting this latest record."

Player Support Gets Results
Allen Returns to Coach Rams

Allen (left) reads prepared statement

By BOB OATES
(The Los Angeles Times)

LOS ANGELES — The most dramatic chapter in the history of a football team that has been in ferment for more than 20 years was written Monday by George Allen when he succeeded himself as head coach of the Los Angeles Rams of the National Football League.

He has been out of a job since he was fired on the day after Christmas. He came back on his own terms—which he outlined as follows in an interview:

SAME TERMS

"They are the exact terms of my old contract as to salary and duration. And there is no indemnity clause. It would not have been fair play to hold up the Rams at a time like this. I came back for one reason—because my players stood up for me."

Allen resumes where he left off, at $40,000 a year, with only two years remaining on his original contract, plus a bonus plan which added about $20,000 to his Ram income in 1968.

HAD TWO OFFERS

The Los Angeles Times learned:

1. The only significant difference in his arrangement with the Ram president, Daniel F. Reeves, is that Allen will now have broader authority in all areas bearing on the football team.

2. Allen turned down two "incredible offers," one in each league, according to Roman Gabriel, a man with extensive and close NFL contacts. Gabriel said:

HARD TO REJECT

"We have reliable information from the city concerned that one club offered him two jobs, coach and general manager, at $85,000 a year. He would have had full control, which is what he wants, of course, and what you need to run a pro-club today. And when they read that he owns a $150,000 home, they called back and offered him a rent-free $150,000 house. I couldn't have blamed him if he'd gone. It takes quite a man to come back to us on a principle."

TRIED FOR VINCE

3. It was pressure from Allen's players, who were united almost unanimously, which influenced the Rams to bring him back. A secondary factor was the club's inability to land Vince Lombardi, the only other coach who, in the collective opinion of the Ram playing squad, "would have had a chance to maintain our winning momentum."

4. The Ram players' committee—Eddie Meador, Lamar Lundy, Merlin Olsen and Gabriel—never actually met with owner Reeves. "But," said Gabriel, "we were so nearly unanimous that we were able to exert pressure quietly and in a dignified way."

ALMOST UNANIMOUS

It was learned that of the 40 Rams on the active squad, 38 supported Allen actively. Only one was opposed, and one is believed to have been neutral.

"I am quite sure," said Gabriel, "that there has never been an instance in the history of football when such a large proportion of players have been willing to stand up and be counetd for their coach. Usually, second-string players are against any coach, just for the hell of it, whether they like him or not, because they aren't playing. Almost everybody was trying to get him back—starters and reserves."

EVEN THE SUBS

Gabriel said that of the 53 Rams (active players and reserves) "no more than three opposed Allen—no more than five others were neutral."

The players were only attempting to influence Reeves. But curiously, in lining up so solidly, in the end they influenced Allen to pass up two "once-in-a-alifetime" offers.

Said Allen: "The way my players have been supporting me, I felt that if I went to another team, I would be letting them down."

WAS INTERESTED

Of the offers from an American League club (Buffalo) and an NFL club, he said:

"I am interested in challenges, so I would have been interested in those teams. But we've got something started in Los Angeles now and I want to see it through."

Said Olsen, the all-pro Ram tackle: "the word for this is sacrifice. George is sacrificing everything a coach could want—a lot of money and the chance to be his own boss. This is the most unselfless act I've ever heard of in football. There's been a lot of talk about integrity in the last couple of weeks. Here you see integrity in action."

ENDORSATION

Deacon Jones, the Ram superstar, was asked to define the qualities in Allen which elicited this response.

"The man's dedication," said Deacon, "and his ability to handle a pro squad. He isn't the only coach who knows football, and he isn't the the only who can coach college or high school ball. But he's one of the very few who can coach pros."

Quarterback Gabriel said: "As a team we feel we've won the battle. Our next job is to win the war—the championship. The best thing that has come out of this is that George and Dan Reeves know each other better now."

FAN FARE — By Walt Ditzen

A Beep from Weeb

Prepared for Defeat

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (AP) — "The world won't fall in on the American Football League if we don't win."

Weeb Ewbank, coach of the New York Jets of the AFL, was talking about his team's Sunday date in the Super Bowl in Miami with Baltimore Colts of the National Football League.

Ewbank believes his team can win if the Jets don't beat themselves, but he wants it known he doesn't think this championship game between the two leagues proves anything.

"One game doesn't indicate a thing," said Ewbank.

"In order to determine the merits of the two leagues, you have to have a series of games, not just one," Ewbank said. "Suppose we lose? Only one of 15 other teams in the NFL defeated Baltimore."

Ewbank, who also has coached in the NFL, said the difference between the experienced NFL and the junior AFL is narrowing because of the common draft.

SOLACE

"I think it has given the AFL an opportunity to get fine ball players. In the past, we only got a percentage of them. There is no question that each year we come closer."

The Jets' coach isn't making any excuses, nor is he preaching a losing attitude. He believes his AFL champs can upset the 18½-point favored Colts at the Orange Bowl in this third annual Super Bowl game.

"What the Jets have to do," said Ewbank, "is to go out and execute. We have to be careful not to fumble, or fail to cover on a pass pattern, not to get intercepted. The team which makes the fewest of these mistakes will win. All I can say is that in the last two years we have been beaten but we haven't beaten ourselves."

Armstrong and Dagg Bring Curling Sweep

Keith Dagg, a former Island representative, and Jim Armstrong, former provincial schoolboy champion, made it a clean sweep for the Victoria Curling Club on Sunday by winning the last two south Island berths in the Vancouver Island men's zone curling final.

FIRST WINNERS

Play is at the Duncan Curling Club, Jan. 24-26, and two survivors will carry on to the Pacific Coast Curling Association final against two winners from the other two PCCA zones.

Action at the Victoria club Sunday, as it was throughout the bonspiel-type playoff which drew 27 starters, was highlighted often by brilliant shotmaking.

THE HARD WAY

Armstrong, who lost his first game on an extra end and then barely survived by taking a 13-end decision in his next start, made an outstanding comeback to edge out Gary Merrett's Duncan rink, in one of the "B" event semifinals.

Up against it when Merrett stole three points on the fourth end for a 4-1 lead, Armstrong was still three rocks in arrears at 6-3 starting the ninth end.

BRILLIANT DRAWS

It was Merrett's turn to come up with a big shot on the 10th. He faced two rocks fully in the four-foot on the centre line, one behind and one in front of the tee line and protected by guard in front of the rings. He made the almost impossible draw to regain the lead.

EXCITING FINISH

Tied up coming home, Merrett made it tough by coming around a guard to wind up in the centre of the four-foot ring with his first shot. Armstrong followed with a lay-up only about two inches from a dead freeze and won when Merrett's last rock didn't get quite enough of the counting stone.

Armstrong reached the "B" semifinals earlier Sunday, breaking up a close game with Don Matheson by scoring three points on the 10th end and stealing three on the 11th.

Curling with Armstrong are Lyle Garraway, Bruce Stephen and Rob Thorburn.

Dagg, who has Jack Trueman, Barry Harvey and Les Brice on his rink, made it to the Island final with Sunday victories over Fred Duncan of Duncan and Lloyd Larson of the Victoria club.

Key end against Larson was the sixth. With Dagg leading, 4-2, after a steal of one of the fifth end, Larson was faced with the choice of drawing for one or making a tap takeout around a guard on outside ice. He gambled for the two points the tap would have brought, raised Dagg in for a second counter and a 6-2 lead.

FUTILE STRUGGLE

Larson's rink curled well in a comeback try but couldn't get closer than 6-8 with last rock against on the home end. Dagg didn't have to throw his last rock.

Against Duncan, Dagg missed an open takeout for four on the fourth end and had a point stolen. On the 10th end with Duncan leading, 5-3, Dagg had a chance for three but missed with his first rock and Duncan had the only rock in the rings when Dagg went down for his last shot.

He got outside after deciding to try and blank the end and Duncan took a 6-3 lead.

Dagg tied it up on the 11th but appeared to be headed for elimination when a last - rock attempt to draw around a guard was a bit heavy and left him in the back 12-foot ring.

Mt. Douglas Captures Second Spot

A Mt. Douglas rink skipped by Bud Mossop and including Barney Garraway, Bruce Walker and Dave Kirsop won the second south island berth in the Vancouver Island schoolboys' final by defeating Gary Wilkinson of Victoria, 12-3, at the Victoria Curling Club on Sunday.

Owen Moore and his Esquimalt Senior High combination of Tracy Gillott, Dave Merrifield and Lloyd Johnson won the "A" event of the southern playoff in Duncan on Saturday.

The "B" event final was moved to Victoria when the two Victoria-area rinks became finalists in play at Duncan.

Two City Rinks In Island Final

DUNCAN —Betty Chalmers and her Victoria Curling Club combination of Marg Inglis, Molly Bedington and Edna Messum made it to the Vancouver Island ladies' final on Sunday by the margin of less than a half inch.

Playing in the "B" event final to decide the second south Island representative, the Chalmers rink made it on a furiously-swept last-rock draw which became the winning shot on a measure.

COLD DRAW NEEDED

Mrs. Chalmers, who lost an 8-7 decision to Bea Becker of Victoria Playland in the "A" event final, faced two opposing rocks with the score 8-8 when she went into the hack for her last try.

Shot rock was covered and she had to draw fully into the eight-foot ring. Heavy with her first-rock try, she almost cut her weight too much.

Mrs. Leach, representing the afternoon group at the Victoria CC, reached the "B" event final Sunday morning with an 8-6 win over Phyllis Bird of Esquimalt.

Mrs. Chalmers and Mrs. Becker (Nan Sexton, Gail Wren, Marg Stubbs) will play against rinks skipped by Evelyn Stirzaker of Port Alberni and Joyce Mawhinney of Campbell River in the Island final, scheduled at Playland the weekend of Jan. 17.

Leyenhorst, Perry Complete Lineup

NANAIMO — Rinks skipped by Arie Leyenhorst of the Alberni Valley Curling Club and Chuck Perry of the Comox Valley Curling Club won the last two north Island berths in the Vancouver Island men's zone final early Sunday morning.

Perry (Bob Carscadden, Searle Raskob, Terry Bloom) defeated Norm Thiessen of Nanaimo, 10-4, in the other "B" semifinal.

Art Meyers (Carl Olson, Gordie Kruger, Keith Acorn) of the Comox Valley club and Ralph Boyd (George Bayford, Bob Welsh, Garry Heslop) of Campbell River won the first two berths by reaching the final of "A" event.

Wakeham Fails Qualifying Test

Bill Wakeham failed Monday in his attempt to qualify for the $100,000 Los Angeles Open golf tournament which is scheduled to start Thursday.

His score in the qualifying round played yesterday on the Lakeside Country Club course was unavailable but Associated Press reported he was not among the 26 non-exempt professionals who qualified.

Wakeham, sponsored by a group of golf enthusiasts who put up $15,000 to give him his chance on golf's "gold trail," left Victoria late last month for his first PGA try.

Two other young British Columbia golfers, also making their first try on the PGA tour, made it. Wayne Vollmer of Vancouver shot a two-over-par 72 and Bob Cox of Richmond made it with a 73.

Qualifiers were led by singer Don Cherry, who shot a 68. Bob Duden of Portland was in a group at 70 and George Bayer of Pasadena made it with a 72.

Among the better-known golfers who didn't make it were Dave Ragan and Jerry Steelsmith. No amateur made the qualifying cutoff of 73.

The Los Angeles Open, first big pro tournament of the year, offers $20,000 to the winner and has drawn most of the name professionals.

Jayvees Best First United

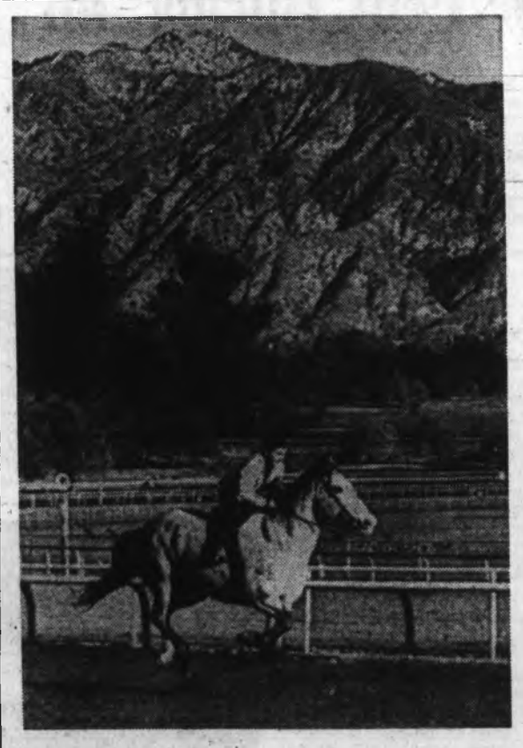
University of Victoria Jayvees defeated First United Senior "B," 31-13, Monday in a Victoria Women's Basketball League game at S. J. Willis Junior High School.

Trish Hadfield, with 12 points, and Linda Gray, with six, led UVic. Linda Edge and Gail Eakin each had four points for the losers.

Buffey Fined

TORONTO (CP) — Referee Vern Buffey, who missed airline connections in Toronto after a heavy snowstorm, has been fined for missing a National Hockey League game in Minneapolis on Dec. 28.

Amount of the fine was not announced by referee-in-chief Scotty Morrison.



'Shoe' Back in Saddle

A steel rod still embedded in his left leg, jockey Willie Shoemaker Monday started preparing for a return to racing by galloping a horse at Santa Anita. Shoemaker, who broke his leg in a spill last Jan. 23, said it would be probably a month or six weeks before he would be able to ride competitively but said his leg "felt fine."—(AP)

Rivalry Blooms On Local Scene

"It should be 'very interesting' like the fellow on TV says," commented Howie Tooby, coach of University of Victoria Vikettes when asked about Wednesday's basketball game against Maplettes, the other Victoria entry in the Inter-City Senior Women's Basketball League.

The 7:30 p.m. clash at Victoria High School will be the first meeting of the two clubs since UVic entered the league this season and Tooby feels that Maplettes, Canadian champions as Rawlings last year, could be in for a surprise.

"They're bigger than we are, and I anticipate we'll have some trouble on the boards, but we're faster and perhaps have a little more depth."

Tooby is in a good position to know. He coached the opposition last season.

Vikettes, who are currently tied for the lead in the Western Canadian Intercollegiate Athletic Association league with University of Manitoba, are currently four points out of a playoff spot in the B.C. league.

Maplettes are involved in a first-place struggle with Vancouver Molsons, while Vancouver Mt. Pleasant holds the third and final playoff spot.

Victoria Cougars Sunday received a boost in their attempt to jump from the cellar to first place in their second B.C. Junior Hockey League season when their closest rivals failed to gain much ground.

ODD AFFAIR

Vernon Essos and Penticton Broncos scored in five-goal spurts at Vernon, playing to a 5-5 tie which left them deadlocked for second place, three points behind the leading Cougars.

In addition, Broncos, who will be here on Saturday, now have only one game in hand while Vernon has played four games more than Cougars.

Essos exploded first for two goals by Jack Marsh and one each by Wayne Dye, Bob Blanchette and Jim Inglis during a 12-minute, 52-second stretch in the second period.

TAGGART BACK

Pat Laughton, with two goals, Ed Hays and Norm Jackson were the other Bronco scorers.

At New Westminster, the last-place Royals extended their unbeaten streak to three games with their second, straight win, a 9-3 victory over fourth-place Kelowna Buckaroos.

Royals outshot the visitors, 42-29, and had leads of 4-1 and 7-3 at the end of the first and second periods, respectively.

Christmas Arrives for Injured Player

VANCOUVER (CP) — Injured hockey player Ken Silver is in good spirits in hospital here after being flown to Vancouver from Des Moines, Iowa, his mother said Monday.

"Ken will be in hospital for a long time but he is in good spirits," Mrs. Marg Smith of Vanderhoof, B.C., reported. "Both his legs are broken and it will take time to heal. We don't know how long he'll be in hospital."

Her son, who played with Des Moines Oak Leafs of the International Hockey League, arrived in Vancouver Saturday afternoon in a chartered ambulance plane. The trip was financed by his teammates and fans.

Ken was injured Nov. 4 when a pickup truck, in which he and teammate Jim Currie of Burnaby, B.C., were riding, went out of control. He was unconscious until just before Christmas but improved rapidly after that and doctors decided he could return home — but only in an ambulance plane.

Dr. Ronald Woods, team physician, set up a fund for the plane. Money that had been set aside for a Christmas Party for the Oak Leafs and their families went into the fund. The players also donated their bonuses for the flight.

The injured player's father, Ken, Sr., his mother and other members of the Silver family were at the airport when the plane arrived.

The injured man was taken to St. Paul's Hospital.

Currie is recuperating in Burnaby.

Other Clubs Are Singing the Blues As St. Louis Veterans Set the Beat

Released

Ed Dorohoy, former star with Victoria Cougars of the Western Hockey League, was released yesterday as coach and general-manager of the Winnipeg Jets of the Western Canada Junior Hockey League. The executive decision followed a 5-3 defeat by Calgary Centennials on Friday which was the Jets' fourth straight loss. Dorohoy, who had his club in third place with a 15-18 record, was working on a two-year contract.

MONTREAL (CP) — There were smirks and knowing looks among hockey people when St. Louis Blues drafted veteran goaltender Glenn Hall from Chicago Black Hawks in the Nation Hockey League's initial expansion draft in June 1967, after Hall had announced his retirement.

The looks turned to outright astonishment when one year later St. Louis coach Scotty Bowman softly slipped the name of Jacques Plante into the draft proceedings, picking him from New York Rangers, although Plante had been out of pro hockey since his retirement in 1965.

Hall, now 37, and Plante, almost 40, have since proved Bowman a shrewd judge in a hockey deal.

The two St. Louis veterans have such a lead in the goaltending race that it would take more than a dozen goals by Los Angeles Kings in tonight's game to put their mid-season Vezina Trophy lead in jeopardy.

The goaltenders for the team with the fewest goals against after each team has played 38 games—exactly half this season's schedule—share $250 as mid-season Vezina Trophy leaders.

Considering that Los Angeles hasn't scored a goal in its last two games, the pair appear to be a shoo-in.

NHL statistics released Monday show that Plante, who leads the league in shutouts with five, has a fantastic average of 1.76 goals against per game, a mark he never attained even while winning six Vezina Trophy titles with Montreal Canadiens in the 1950s.

He and Hall, whose average is 2.46 and who has three shutouts, have a combined average of 2.11. Boston Bruins, with Gerry Cheevers and Ed Johnston, have a combined total of 91 goals against and a 2.53 average.

TWO IN ROW

Getting a share of the defensive spotlight during the past week were the Kings, who Sunday night became the first club in at least 12 seasons to be involved in successive scoreless games.

The Kings, who played to a 0-0 tie with the Blues on New Year's Day in Los Angeles, had a similar affair with the Seals in Oakland. Goalkeepers Gary Smith of the Seals and rookie Gerry Desjardins of the Kings both made some outstanding stops in recording their third shutouts of the season.

CANADIENS LEAD

In other games Sunday, Montreal Canadiens regained the East Division lead with a 4-2 win over the Black Hawks in Chicago, Detroit Red Wings took a 2-1 decision from Pittsburgh Penguins, Toronto Maple Leafs played to a 2-2 tie with the Flyers in Philadelphia and New York Rangers trimmed Minnesota North Stars, 5-1.

Wings balanced their record for the season when Gordie Howe produced the 111th game-winning goal of his NHL career in the third period.

In Chicago, goals 68 seconds apart by Jacques Lemaire in the first period and steady goalkeeping by Rogatien Vachon was the difference for Canadiens. Standout goalkeeping by Bernie Parent, who made 46 stops, kept the Leafs from getting more than one point and Ron Stewart and Rod Gilbert led the Rangers with two goals each.

Allan Cup Champs Sixth in Tourney

STOCKHOLM (UPI)—Victoriaville Tigers, Canada's defending Allan Cup champions, played their best game of the Bunny Ahearne hockey tournament on Monday to gain a 1-1 tie with Aik of Stockholm.

Despite the tie, the Canadians finished no better than sixth place, managing only three points. Djurgaarden, Soedertaelje and Aik, all Swedish teams, finished on top in that order.

Night Affair

CHICAGO (AP)—Major league baseball's all-star game will be played at night for the second successive year, it was announced here Monday.

The 1969 game is scheduled at Washington, D.C., Stadium on July 22. The 1968 game was played under lights in Houston's Astrodome.

Commission Decides To Take Six to Court

FRANKFORT, Ky. (UPI) — The Kentucky State Racing Commission Monday said it "will proceed" with citations against six persons allegedly involved in doctoring the feed of Derby-winner Dancer's Image.

At the same meeting in Lexington, the commission also entered its final order awarding the Derby winner's purse to Forward Pass because Phenylbutazone was found in the urine of Dancer's Image after the race. The written order was in line with the commission's decision announced Dec. 23.

Cited previously for improper racing conduct were trainer Lou Cavalaris and assistant-trainer Robert Bernard, veterinarian Alex Harthill, Douglas Davis Jr., another trainer, and attorneys Arthur W. Grafton and Edward S. Bonnie.

The incident, which occurred two days after the Derby, involved doctoring of the feed of Dancer's Image with a substance Harthill said was aspirin.

NO DATE SET

However, the commission set no date for the hearings on the citations. It is at least temporarily barred from moving against Grafton and Bonnie because of a temporary injunction issued by judge Henry Meigs.

The commission's written order does not affect the order of finish or the parimutuel betting, for which purposes Dancer's Image is considered the winner by the commission.

The order, however, distributes the purse among Forward Pass for first place, Francie's Hat for second place, T.V. Commercial for third and Kentucky Sherry for fourth.

"Prohibition of the use of Phenylbutazone is necessary in order to preserve honesty and integrity in racing because the indiscriminate use and withdrawal of the medication with many horses would vary their performance in racing," the commission stated in its order.

"Regardless of the amount of phenylbutazone and-or derivative thereof in the urine of Dancer's Image on Saturday, May 4, 1968, its presence in any amount shows that the administration affected the health and speed of the horse by enabling him to run racing sound," the order said.

Vikings Whipped In Playoff Bowl

MIAMI (UPI) — Craig Morton, taking over from Don Meredith at half-time according to a pre-game plan, threw a 20-yard touchdown pass to Craig Baynham Sunday to give Dallas Cowboys a 17-13 win over Minnesota Vikings in the National Football League's Playoff Bowl game.

NEW FORMAT?

It was the ninth annual meeting between NFL runners-up, and there were reports that it would be the last. Only 22,961 fans came out to watch in the rain, and there is speculation that future Playoff Bowl games will be between the runners-up in the NFL and American Football League.

Trailing by 0-13, in the second quarter, the Cowboys got to 13-10 by halftime as Meredith finally got his club moving.

He found Bob Hayes all alone with a long pass for a 51-yard touchdown, then threw 37 yards to Lance Rentzel to set up Mike Clark's 11-yard field goal.

Vikings moved ahead quickly when Bob Bryant took the first Dallas punt and returned it 81 yards for a touchdown.

Then the Vikings cashed in on an interception and a fumble recovery by corner-back Earsell Mackbee for 37 and 23-yard field goals by Fred Cox and take a 13-point lead before the first quarter ended.

Gary Cuozzo, who replaced Joe Kapp at quarterback in the second half, almost pulled it out for the Vikings when he passed them within five yards of a touchdown in the fourth quarter. But halfback Jim Lindsey fumbled and Leroy Jordan recovered the ball for Dallas to end the threat.

Meredith, who completed 15 of 24 passes for 243 yards in the two quarters he played, was named the game's outstanding offence player.

Comox, Chilliwack Take Tourney Lead

Comox and Chilliwack won opening games against Esquimalt in the Canadian forces Zone 1 hockey Tournament at Esquimalt Sports Centre Monday.

Comox defeated Esquimalt, 4-2, in a morning game while Chilliwack scored a 6-2 win in the afternoon.

Pat Keefe, who broke his left arm in the third period, Wayne MacLean, Lou White and Jack Hamilton all had a goal and an assist for Comox. Len Desjardins and George Ede scored second-period goals for Esquimalt. The game was tied, 2-2, at the end of the second period.

Three games are scheduled today; Esquimalt against Chilliwack at 8 a.m., Comox and Chilliwack at 10:45 and Esquimalt against Comox at 2:45 p.m. before the tournament ends Wednesday with the championship game between the top two teams in the preliminary round-robin series.

Hitting on 46 per cent of their shots in the first half, Chinooks enjoyed a 46-31 lead at the intermission. They ran away with the game in the second half, hitting a remarkable 59 per cent from the floor.

Glen Moffat, with 26 points, and John Rouanzoin, getting 21 of his 24 points in the second half, were outstanding for Chinooks.

Bill Carlson, who scored 20 points Saturday, added 19 Sunday to move into third place in the league scoring race.

McLEAN AT 199

League scoring-leader Brent McLean just missed becoming the first player to score 200 points this season, getting 19 for Saints before fouling out late in the game to boost his total to 199.

Clair Wakefield led Saints with 25 points to bring his season's total to 169, 30 behind McLean and 16 ahead of Carlson.

Chinooks wrap up the home portion of their regular schedule next Saturday and Sunday at Central against the improving North Shore club. Victoria finishes with two games each against Killarney and Grocers on the mainland.

Thieves Have Right Boat For Getaway

Wham, who holds a straightaway speed record of 159.2 miles an hour in the boat, "Miss Merion Bluegrass," said the blue and gold craft was taken during the night while it was parked on a trailer at his motel.

Police Forces Linked In Hunt for Killers

Mrs. MacDonald

OTTAWA (CP) — Police in Ontario, Quebec and the states of New York and Michigan joined forces Monday to follow leads in the brutal and apparent pointless murders of two men Friday on a remote highway 25 miles west of here.

The victims were Gerald MacDonald, 31, of Ottawa and his uncle, Kenneth Valee, 42, of St. Clair Shores, Mich. Their wives survived the shooting.

The three killers were described as in their 20s and police said there is no reason to believe they had seen their victims before, or an underworld killing was involved. At Chapeau, Ont., 90 miles north of the death scene, police sought to link the shootings with three "unruly young strangers" who caused a disturbance during a brief stop Friday.

San Francisco U.

Teachers Strike, Too

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A raucous group of about 1,000 minority students, striking teachers and supporters failed Monday to disrupt the reopening of San Francisco State College. Later, however, the San Francisco Labor Council sanctioned the teacher strike.

"A militant minority of the faculty have hitch-hiked onto the militant students' violence-ridden strike for a vicious power grab," said Dr. S. I. Hayakawa, acting president of the college.

"I don't know how I am going to stop them from closing the school, but I am going to try," the Vancouver-born Hayakawa said. "I am not going to accept it closed by anybody."

The action of the labor council's executive board presaged new trouble for a campus shaken by rioting and vandalism since Nov. 6, when the Black Students Union called a strike.

DOUBLE DEMAND

The union teachers, claiming to represent about one-fourth of the college's 1,100 faculty members, have demanded that the college yield to the student strikers' demands as well as their own.

When the college reopened Monday morning after a long Christmas holiday, there were a few minor scuffles and fist fights.

Most of the 18,000 students and regular faculty went through a noisy picket line.

CUT FOREHEAD

One instructor, who refused to identify himself, suffered a cut on the forehead when four teachers tried to keep him from entering the Humanities Building.

An estimated 300 police were on or near the campus but only a few were in evidence.

Outside the main entrance, an estimated 1,000 persons marched with signs. They shouted "pigs" and "fascists" at the watching police and "scabs" at students passing through.

The teachers union demands mort pay, smaller classes and union recognition.

Hayakawa, who reopened the troubled campus Dec. 2 after his predecessor had closed it due to violence, won strong endorsements from Gov. Ronald Reagan and Dr. Glenn S. Dumke, chancellor of the 19-college state system.

Gov. Reagan in Sacramento said: "Those who want to get an education and those who want to teach should be protected in that at the point of bayonets if necessary."

FIVE ADDITIONS

Teachers were warned that anyone failing to report to classes for five days is considered to have resigned automatically.

The student strikers, estimated at 200 to 300 activists with up to 1,000 sometime participants, stuck to their original 10 demands with five additions.

These included a fully autonomous Black Studies Department; admission of any non-white applicant regardless of education, no punishment for strikers, and reinstatement of militant George Murray as a part-time English teacher for minority students.

Murray, a militant Black Panther, has urged Negro students to bring guns to class. His suspension Nov. 1 was a major factor in the strike five days later.

Canadian Stamp Improvement Placed in Care of Artists

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal government turned toward the artistic community Monday to find out how to improve the looks of Canadian postage stamps.

The post office department announced creation of a six-man advisory group to tell Postmaster-General Eric Kierans what changes for the better can be made in the procedures of selecting and reproducing stamp designs.

"This doesn't mean we think all Canadian stamps are drab," said department spokesman Gordon Cunningham, chairman of the new advisory group. "But we want artists to tell us how to achieve the best possible standards."

The department has its eye on stamp collectors. It hopes to double its annual philatelic sales to more than $2,000,000, the announcement said.

Other members of the advisory group are Julien Hebert of Montreal, who designed the symbol of Expo 67; Alex Colville, painter and former fine arts professor at Mount Allison University, Sackville, N.B., who designed the 1967 centennial coins; Yves Gaucher, Montreal painter and printmaker;

Allan Fleming of Toronto, designer of the linked CN symbol now used by Canadian National Railways, and of the layout for the National Film Board's 1967 book Year of the Land; and David Silcox, visual arts officer with the Canada Council, which decides how federal government contributions to the arts will be spent.

Cunningham said he hopes to bring this group together for their first meeting in Ottawa next week.

The post office department's traditional procedure has been to invite certain artists to submit designs for a stamp after it has chosen a subject.

Not infrequently, the department has encountered refusals to submit designs, a spokesman said, on the ground that no qualified persons would be looking them over. Final approval of Canadian stamp designs has always rested with the postmaster-general, even if he happened to be a man who could not draw a straight line.

The new advisory group is supposed to study all aspects of the design and production both of definitive stamps, which are the regular series, and of commemoratives, which are issued to mark special persons, anniversaries or events. It will report "within a short time," Cunningham said.

Foghorns Stuck By Frost

Weird toots and honks from buoys at Ogden Point, Brotchie Ledge and William Head during the cold weather were brought on when the foghorns stuck.

They had to be restarted and fixed to blow more often so they wouldn't stick again, coast guard officials report.

Freak conditions also muffled the fog horn on Trial Island on the shore side, although it could still be heard at sea. The coast guard received dozens of phone calls warning that the horn wasn't working.

Anti-Dumping Law

Tribunal Established To Decide on Tax

OTTAWA (CP) — A tax expert and two senior civil servants were named Monday to form a tribunal which will perform a key function in applying a new law governing import practices.

W. W. Buchanan, Ottawa commodity-tax consultant and former tariff board member, will be chairman of the tribunal set up under the Anti-Dumping Act, which became law Jan. 1.

Tribunal members named in the announcement by Finance Minister Edgar Benson are B. J. Barrow, assistant deputy minister of industry, and J. P. C. Gauthier, general director of the office of commodities and industries in the trade department.

The tribunal will apply the main new feature of the Anti-Dumping Act, which for the first time in Canada will require a finding of injury or potential injury to domestic industry before a special tax can be imposed on imported goods judged to have entered Canada at a price less than that prevailing in the country of origin.

Customs officials will continue to decide whether goods have entered at a dumped price. The tribunal will rule on the injury issue.

Red Space Ship Venus-Bound

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet Union launched an unmanned space ship Sunday on a 155,000,000-mile journey that it hopes will end in mid-May with a soft landing on Venus.

The official news agency Tass said the Venus V vehicle was photographed 90,000 miles from earth by an observatory near Alma Ata, Kazakhstan. It said the photographs were sent to Moscow and "the quality of the pictures is good."

FURTHER STUDIES

Tass said Venus V would continue atmospheric studies begun by the Soviet spacecraft Venus IV, which made a soft landing on the cloud-covered planet Oct. 18, 1967. Venus IV showed the planet to be hot and inhospitable, relaying temperatures of up to 536 degrees Fahrenheit in an atmosphere consisting almost entirely of carbon monoxide.

Venus V, weighing about 1¼ tons, was first put into earth ordit and then launched into outer space from a position over Africa. Tass said all equipment on board was functioning normally and ground controllers can make course corrections to ensure reaching the goal.

HAS HIGH HOPES

Stressing the difficulty of a Venus shot, a Tass science commentator wrote: "It would be much easier for a marksman to solve the problem of hitting a flying honeybee from the window of a moving motorcar. However, great experience of interplanetary flights of automatic stations has been accumulated by the Soviet Union."

NEW EMPHASIS

His words indicated the change of emphasis in the Soviet space program to unmanned flights, where it has an apparent edge on the United States.

The Big Issue for 1969: HOUSING

Townhouses

Oak Bay To Fill Its Gaps

By CLEMENT CHAPPLE

Garden courts and townhouses will take priority in development of Oak Bay, Mayor Fred Hawes said in his inaugural speech to council Monday night.

Hawes

Pointing out that Oak Bay has little commerce and no industry from which to draw revenue, Mayor Hawes said, "we must take a close look at our population density . . ."

"We have no choice but to plan for greater density of population on the remaining undeveloped lands."

This will require between 400 and 500 new housing units each year for the next three years, the Mayor said.

The scale of new construction would compare to an average of only 19 apartment units each year between 1961 and 1967. Relaxation of apartment controls a year ago brought the number of units last year to 73, more than 15 per cent of the projected construction.

Mayor Hawes named specific areas for apartment or townhouse construction in Oak Bay. They are:

- The area between Milton and Chaucer Streets, bounded by Elgin and Foul Bay Roads, possibly enlarged to include land between Elgin and Hampshire Roads.
- The area on the north side of Granite Street, from Foul Bay Road.
- The former site of the Old Men's Home on Cadboro Bay Road, if current attempts to acquire the land are successful.
- The Victoria Riding Club property.

He announced a strengthening of the municipality's advisory planning committee by addition of three councillors and four citizens to the body.

Two of the three Oak Bay aldermen re-elected Dec. 7 were greeted Monday night by Mayor Hawes.

Aldermen Ian Horne and Douglas Watts read the oaths in the short ceremony. Ald. Alex Hendry was in hopital and unable to attend the swearing-in.

Saanich Carries Attack With New Committee

By DON GAIN

Saanich Mayor Hugh Curtis has set up a new standing committee of council to tackle the housing crisis in the municipality.

The mayor made the announcement in his address at the 1969 statutory council meeting Monday night.

"In order that this municipality may be in a position to do all possible in the broad field of housing, I am attempting to underscore the importance with which I view this work by establishing a new standing committee of council to be known very simply as 'housing,'" the mayor said.

As and When

The new committee will bring together other municipal departments as and when required in tackling the subject.

This will involve the lands department, social services and comptroller's departments and Roy Broughton, in his capacity as Saanich representative on the B.C. Housing Commission, will report through the new committee.

The mayor appointed Ald. Edith Gunning to head the new committee because of the intensive and extensive study and work she has done in this field.

Money Vital

The mayor warned that many 1969 projects will depend on the money market.

"Our requirements at this time are in the neighborhood of $2,000,000, a not unreasonably large amount of money when one considers the population of this municipality, its taxable assessment and our unused borrowing power.

"If we are able to market these debentures early in the year, then we shall be in quite good shape to carry out much of our program for the forthcoming 12 months. The third indoor recreational facility, the swimming pool community centre complex at Lambrick Park in Gordon Head, will naturally be dependent upon the market situation as we find it in the next months."

He warned that the municipal bond market at the moment "is virtually non-existent" and that, unless some stabilization in interest rates evolves, the selling of municipal bonds will continue to be difficult.

Council approved the 1969 provisional budget which calls for $10,685,000 in expenditures, about $1,166,000 above last year's budget.

Newcomer

Three former incumbent aldermen and one elected for the first time were sworn in at the start of the meeting by Judge M. L. Tyrwhitt-Drake.

The former incumbents are Ed Lum, Alan Newberry and veteran Leslie Passmore. The new alderman is Frank Waring.

The judge told council he was sure that all aldermen knew that an alderman's life was not "all junkets and expense accounts."

Housing Given Emphasis

Macaulay Point For Esquimalt

By BOB PETHICK

Esquimalt will fall heir to the 15-acre Macaulay Point area, council was told Monday night.

In his opening address Mayor Ray Bryant told council:

"This is the appropriate time to announce that after considerable negotiations and meetings with the federal government, it is their intention to turn over to us that portion of the Work Point Barracks area known as Macaulay Point.

"Several meetings were held in 1968 relating to this matter and although formalities have not been completed in total, we must begin to make preparations as to what maximum use can be made of this area."

RECREATIONAL VALUE

Mayor Bryant said the area contained a historic site and consideration should be given as to whether the site should be developed in that context.

He said it will contain potential recreational value, "and I would ask the council to consider these possibilities as well."

"This is not the only piece of property that may be acquired from the defence department, but it is the one which we are most likely to acquire during 1969 and I would request all committees of council to study this property early in the year," he said.

COMMITTEE EXPANDED

Mayor Bryant said the subject that is becoming important in the municipal area is housing. "I feel this subject has become important enough to be included in our committee system, and I am expanding the planning and zoning committee to include the subject of housing."

He said a major area of investigation for council would be to seek out and identify what the people of Esquimalt want in connection with recent press releases dealing with recreational subjects.

Martin Institute

Units Close To Handover

By IAN STREET

Negotiations are now in the final stage for the handover by the provincial government of the administration of the new Eric Martin Institute to the Royal Jubilee Hospital, it was learned here Monday.

Health Minister Ralph Loffmark was reported to have sent a letter to the Jubilee board setting out the government proposal. He refused to discuss it until board members had a chance to study the proposal, but indicated the institute now nearing completion would become part of Jubilee.

The minister also indicated that when the 120-bed Eric Martin Institute is opened sometime this spring, the present 40-bed psychiatric wing at the Jubilee would be converted to other use. The patients in it would be transferred to the Eric Martin Institute which adjoins the hospital.

UNIT COSTS

Mr. Loffmark announced Monday he has requested medical authorities to recommend a system of units costs to be paid by the government under the proposed new $1-a-day out-patient care for mental patients.

It follows a cabinet order passed about three weeks ago which authorized the health minister to designate certain general hospitals as centres for out-patient psychiatric care. Mr. Loffmark said the four locations where such action will be taken in the next few months are at the Eric Martin Institute, Vancouver General Hospital, the Health Sciences Centre at UBC, and the Youth Development Centre in Burnaby.

MAJOR MOVE

The minister said it was a "very major departure" leading to the introduction of public financing for out-patient psychiatric services. All in-patients at provincial mental institutions and in psychiatric wings of general hospitals now are covered by B.C. Hospital Insurance, but Mr. Loffmark said the extension of $1-a-day care to out-patients will enable more people to be treated within the community.

This is a major part of the decentralization of mental health services in the province, he said.

RCMP Policy

Merger Ends Policing

The RCMP won't undertake the policing of Langford, Colwood and Metchosin if they become a municipality as a result of the Feb. 1 vote, Assistant Commissioner G. R. Engel said Monday.

He said a federal regulation prohibits the force undertaking the policing of any new municipalities with populations of more than 15,000.

"Those three areas have somewhat over that population," he said.

At present the RCMP is working under a provincial agreement with the attorney-general's department, added Assistant Commissioner Engel.

"Of course, we wouldn't withdraw as soon as the vote was taken or anything like that," he added.

"We would make some arrangement with the attorney-general's department on how long we could continue there."

Regrets Delay

Cumming Upholds Hospital

By NANCY BROWN

It will take a bold and powerful man to upset the array of advocates of a hospital in the northern peninsula, North Saanich Mayor J. B. Cumming said Monday night.

In his inaugural address to council, he said that he has a firm belief that when decisions are made on the peninsula hospital North Saanich will have little reason for resentment and regrets.

"The Agnew-Peckham report cost more than $40,000—it was a most excellent study," he said.

ON RECORD

"The Victoria Hospital planning committee, the BCHIS and the several ministers of health have been on record for a number of years on the need for a hospital on the peninsula; the provincial government will pay 60 per cent of the bill.

"It will be a bold and powerful man who upsets that array," he said.

Mayor Cumming said it is intended that a referendum for the construction of acute care hospitals should go to the people in the fall.

'POOR INDICATION'

"I doubt, somehow, that we will be ready in the time proposed to lay plans before the public.

"The time lost and controversy over the extended care is a poor indication for the future."

Loan Bylaw Raised

School Borrowing Hits Municipalities

"School boards used to borrow through the provincial treasury but now it is the responsibility of the municipalities. We have to borrow money at the expense of the property owners. This is another example of the government putting responsibility on the municipalities," he said.

Remarks were made after treasurer Peter Cairns said the annual loan bylaw was up from $400,000 to $500,000 and this was largely due to the new system of school financing.

"We looked into it. It is in the act and all perfectly legal. It disturbed me," Mayor Bryant said.

Injuries Undetermined

Gorge Survivor Happy as Lark

Three-year-old Karen Anne Fairburn, who was near death for 24 hours after a fall Dec. 19 into the icy waters of the Gorge near Craigflower Bridge, is home from St. Joseph's Hospital.

Though smiling and seemingly healthy, Karen's injuries will not be known fully for some time. It took doctors a long time to warm up her body and get her blood flowing properly.

She missed Christmas at home but Santa visited twice, once in the intensive-care ward, once in the children's.

The little blonde has trouble speaking since the accident, but as an inquiring visitor departed, she blew him a silent kiss goodbye.

Son Tries to Upset Father's Million-Dollar Will

By A. H. MURPHY

A will in which millionaire Victoria businessman Allan Douglas Ford left his Australian son, John Douglas Ford, $50,000 and most of the $1,102,792 remainder to charity, is being contested in British Columbia Supreme Court.

The hearing, which opened Monday, promised to be long and complex and will probably occupy most of the week.

D. M. Gordon is acting for Royal Trust Co., executors of the $1,152,792 estate, and the son is represented by Donald G. Cameron. Mr. Cameron is being advised and assisted by two Australian lawyers, R. G. Davern Wright and James B. Duggan, both of Melbourne. Hugh L. Henderson is representing Christ Church Building Fund, one of the beneficiaries.

The 1958 will which John Ford is trying to upset made cash bequests to friends in addition to the $50,000 to the son, and the residue of the estate was to be divided among a number of Victoria institutions, including the Family Welfare and Children's Aid Society, Gorge Road Hospital, YMCA and YWCA building funds, Multiple Sclerosis Society, Victoria Symphony Society, Queen Alexandra Solarium and the Salvation Army.

A cash bequest of $10,000 was ordered for the Art Gallery of Greater Victoria, and Christ Church Building Fund was to get 5,000 shares of Steep Rock Mine.

Christ Church Cathedral is interested in the hearing because a provision in the bequest of shares to the building fund provides that they may not be sold until they reach $40 or alternatively, for 20 years. The stock now stands at about $6.50.

If the 1958 will was upset, a 1933 will would come into force. Under this testament the son would receive most of the estate, subject to two codicils which made bequests to two Victoria institutions amounting in all to about $350,000.

The court was told Monday there were six codicils to the 1958 will. Mostly they delineated bequests, none over $25,000, to friends and people who had been good to Mr. Ford.

One, however, left Tancred, Mr. Ford's home at 1012 Terrace Avenue, to the city. A collection of furniture was also left to the municipality, in the hope that it would be exhibited in Craigdarroch Castle, if and when it was converted into a museum.

The junior Mr. Ford is trying to upset the will on the grounds that when it was made his father was of unsound mind, memory and understanding and suffering from delusions.

Mr. Gordon said Monday that contention was not true. When the testator made his will he was a successful, well preserved and active businessman, who walked to his office every day, Mr. Gordon said.

Mr. Ford died in October, 1967. He was married in 1908, but had been separated from his wife for 31 years. Following the separation, Mr. Gordon said, Mrs. Ford took her five-year-old son to Australia.

Mrs. Ford died a year before her husband and the son did not see his father again until the father's last illness.

Former western regional vice-president of the Royal Trust, Robert Phipps, said the final will was the result of many memoranda, drafts and literally hundreds of hours of discussion.

He was taken over several draft wills, line by line, by Mr. Gordon, and commented on dozens of marginal notes and annotations.

This testimony took all of Monday.

The trust company officer's evidence showed that many changes had been made in bequests over the years. At one time, the Art Gallery was beneficiary to the value of several hundred thousand dollars, but there were disagreements on terms of acceptance and the final bequest was $10,000.

Several officers of Royal Trust attested to signatures on the various documents.

John Ford, a radio news reporter from Melbourne, sat in court throughout Monday's proceedings.

Ann Landers

Dear Ann Landers: Recently a woman wrote and asked if you thought blondes had more fun. You said you didn't know of any surveys but your own personal opinion was "no."

You are wrong and I proved it.

I am a hairdresser. My natural color is dark brown. Last year, just to satisfy my curiosity, I conducted a personal experiment. I dyed my hair every color on the chart and checked the male reactions for two weeks. I started by going raven's wing black. Coal-black hair is more attention-getting than brown, I discovered by walking through hotel lobbies and sitting in the swingiest cocktail lounges. I kept track of the whistles, propositions and requests for dates. (The last two are not the same.)

Swamped as Platinum

From raven's wing black I went to chestnut. Then I tried the copper tones, next the true reds. From burnt auburn I eased into the blonde shades. I began to get a lot more propositions as well as dinner invitations when I hit honey blonde. By the time I got to platinum, I was so swamped I couldn't keep the names straight.

I became engaged to a wonderful fellow as a platinum blonde. The first thing the guy asked me to do was let my hair go back to its natural color. Funny, isn't it, that men like to date platinum blondes but they want their wives natural? I'm going to be married next month as a brownette.

But facts are facts, Ann. Blondes do have more fun and I proved it. — LUCKY LUCILLE

Dear Lucille: You are lucky — lucky you have any hair left. A gal who dyes her hair a different color every two weeks could end up bald — not engaged. Congratulations and best wishes.

Thousands Will Benefit

Dear Ann Landers: I know you are busy with problems more important than mine but please give me an answer. Thousands of people in your reading audience could benefit from the information.

What does a person do when he is eating out — particularly in the home of a friend — and runs into a bad shrimp, or an oyster that doesn't taste right, or an overripe stuffed olive? Is it best to spit it out in the napkin, spit it out on the plate, leave the table and dispose of it in the bathroom, or swallow it?— BEEZER

Dear Bee: Let's rule out your last suggestion at once. Under no circumstances should a person swallow food he suspects is tainted. The best solution is to dispose of it in the most inconspicious manner. Use a fork or spoon to transport it on to your plate, then place it under a lettuce leaf or a shell —out of sight, if possible.

Fashion Items Not All Feminine

PERSONAL MENTION

By Dorothy Wrotnowski

There was a time—and not so long ago at that — when practically all fashion releases fining their way into this office were concerned entirely with styles for women.

Not so any more, Nearly half the news is about men's fashions and fragrances. They devote pages to perfumes with just as silly names as those they give for women.

The latest release from British Woollen News, direct from London, tells us that men will be wearing purple dinner jackets and that dress-wise men will not be "stooges" at parties any longer.

Here is what they say: "The old dinner jacket is on its way out and making way for a much gayer form of evening wear. It has been said that the wearing of a black uniform for evening occasions was ideal for the male as it allowed the ladies to blossom forth in all their glory.

"All that is over. Future man will want to dress up fashionably and colorfully for his evenings out. Younger men will undoubtedly be the first to project this brighter festive look and for them there are those evening suits in colors such as green, purple, blue and even scarlet.

"Most of the party outfits are worn with black trousers and are subtle in their design in order not to give the appearance of bandleaders' uniforms. Colorful waistcoats and cummerbunds, too, are often part of the evening ensemble and one manufacturer is supplying gold brocade and black waistcoats with the collar and lapels of the jackets faced in a similar material.

"However, for Mr. Average Man, who wishes to be not too conspicuous, the West End of London tailors say that the shawl-collar dinner jacket is now considered rather passe and the single and double breasted jackets with fairly wide notch lapels are running neck and neck in the fashion stakes. Top cloths are lightweight British barathea, mohairs and polyester worsted mixtures.

"In accessories the roll-neck shirt which burst into the evening scene so suddenly last year is likely to fade out just as quickly. But shirt interest there is, with pleats and ruffles pushing the old marcellas and piques way in the background. Number one evening bow fashion is a deep butterfly in silk or velvet."

Well, there you have it. And if you men have any respect for London's West End tailors you'll get busy with those velvets, ruffles and pleats.

Holiday travel stories ending in frustration, disappointment and near disaster were almost the order of the day this season.

I know. My car like so many others was snowed under on a Victoria side street. And I wanted to go to Salt Spring Island.

The most logical way seemed to go by bus up island to Crofton, where I could take the ferry across to Vesuvius.

However as the bus, battling the heavy weather and many stops, got later and later, I almost accepted the fact that I would likely be spending New Year's Eve alone in the hotel at Crofton.

But luck was in and after a fast taxi drive from Crofton Crossroad made the last ferry. Now it seems like an adventure.

A travel story that started most unfortunately and ended happily concerns Mrs. A. I. Sugawara of Vernon. The B.C. Ferry staff rate pretty highly with Mrs. Sugawara as a result.

She was in Vancouver for Christmas and New Year with her son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. H. Haseke. When Mrs. Sugawara leaving Vancouver for a first-time visit to another son-in-law and daughter, John and Chiyo Yamabe at Vesuvius on Salt Spring Island, Mrs. Haseke warned her mother that there would be two stops before she reached Long Harbour. They also gave her a map with the destination marked. These preparations were necessary as Mrs. Sugawara doesn't speak or understand more than a few words of English.

Mr. Haseke drove his mother-in-law to Tsawassen but of course couldn't walk out to the ferry with her. To make a long story short she got on the Swartz Bay ferry. No panic until when, well over an hour later, there hadn't been any stops anywhere. So she went into the coffee shop and said her two words — Long Harbour?

This is when the ferry staff whent into action. They showed her on the map where she was and how they were going to get her to Salt Spring. And during the hour and a half wait at Swartz Bay there was always one member waiting with her. They took her right on to the ferry for Fulford, free of charge and explained to the Fulford ferry staff what had happened.

They also put in a call to the Yamabes on Salt Spring. In the meantime the men on the ferry had arranged a ride for Mrs. Sagawara in case the Yamabes hadn't been in for the phone call.

A Lovelier You

By MARY SUE MILLER

The beauties of ancient civilization masked their faces with packs made of mud and ooze. What's new about today's masks is a high degree of refinement and specialization.

There now is a corrective mask for one's individual requirements. It would be folly, to use any other. A young, olly skin needs an entirely different formula than a thin, dry complexion.

For oily skins, scrub and alkaline masks are indicated. The first type deep-cleanses; the second discourages oil-and blemishes. Slack, dry skins respond to creamy mixtures and slightly astringent formulas. With a honey content, preparations have the power both to lubricate and firm.

Most every girl could use a pickup mask. Their number grows out of sheer demand. In a very few minutes, applications freshen and brighten tired skin before an evening engagement. What a boon!

Accessories Turn Heads

Pants-Plus New Fashion Focus

NEW YORK (CP)—Several startling fashion facts have emerged during the first part of the spring fashion week here.

First and foremost is the avid interest in pants-plus. The plus factor includes tunics long enough to be worn separately as a mini-dress, jumpers, short coats of the regulation pants suit. It spills over from casual to city pants to evening glamor. Even Davidow, the most conservative of coat and suit firms, included one stark-black, long-jacketed pants suit.

Secondly, hats are important, not as hats in themselves but as accessories. They must be planned to complement a definite costume. Many are scarf trimmed, with matching suit or dress scarf.

Thirdly, necklines are completely new. The V-neck, both modest and plunge, is the trend. Turtles, rings and Nehru turnups are on the way out. This creates a distinctive new concept for 1969.

Braid trims introduce another spring facet. The braid may be a contrast color or a print. But it adds another almost accessory look to many costumes. Montreal-born Scaasi, for example, introduced plastic banding, as black plastic on a black-and-white patterned dress, to edge the V-neckline, circle the skirt above the hem and to double-band the wrists.

Belts continue to focus attention on the normal waistline, with a few designers favoring a higher emphasis. But says Anne Klein: "The belt is only important when it's worn as a piece of jewelry, not as a geographical boundary." And as an accessory it is often a contrast color, frequently patent. However there seems to be more self fabric belts than last season.

Another accessory interest is shoes. Here the real news centres in the shoe style developed for the pants outfits. It's a tailored look, with a substantial heel, in height and bulk, and the trouser leg should definitely touch the heel in the back. At the other extreme, sandals are expected to provide an important shoe story for spring.

The true accessory is jewelry. It's still chains and more chains plus endless chains. They're worn around the neck in clunky abandonment. They drip with coins. Many are worn as belts but not as importantly as when introduced a couple of seasons ago. Peals are back in extremely long ropes.

Two tone fabrics are sharp and mostly uncomplicated. A bright color looks as if it had been stencilled onto a light background. All those multi-colored prints have disappeared. Large splashy patterns give way to small and neat designs. Black as a solo color is holding its own in some collections, has been bypassed in others. Beige is turning to brown. And polka dots aren't heralding the spring as gallantly as usual.

Never Lured by Youth Trend

'Better' Clothes Worn As If She Likes Them

By EUGENIA SHEPPARD

NEW YORK—The youth revolution has pretty well settled back where it belongs — with the young. And kooky clothes are gone too.

While they were blasting off, though, the revolution and the clothes thoroughly disturbed the fashio habits of most adults. Hundreds who had never questioned their own taste lost self-confidence.

Some are still unsure what to do next and are even worrying about the length of their skirts. Others are vaguely apologetic about liking what they have come to believe are stuffy couture clothes.

Perla Mattison has never deviated from the kind of clothes she knows are right for her type. While some of her friends have tried shopping in far-out, amusing boutiques, she has gone on wearing well-cut, suave, made-to-order clothes. She wears them as if she likes them and wouldn't — even if she could — trade places with a teenager dressed by Annacat.

In whatever country you meet Perla Mattison, she is one of the most positively dressed, best-groomed women in the room. Fashion in her life is what business is to a man and she does a superb job.

Born in South America, Mrs. Mattison has always had a natural flair. Her clothes all come from Paris and, for a while, she dressed only at Pierre Balmain. Now she also shops at Dior and Mme. Gres, whose smashing diagonal seams and bias cuts never found a better showcase.

Mrs. Mattison has a magnificent wardrobe, collected through the years and always in perfect condition. She is one of Maximillan's best customers and wears mink, broadtail, and an ermine poncho for evening. Her jewels go with the rest of the picture.

Friends say Mrs. Mattison spends at least two hours with the hairdresser every day and, certainly, she has a different hairdo to go with every evening gown.

At a recent dance she was wearing the Mme. Gres black taffeta ballgown with the puffed sleeves, and her hair was fanned out wide at the sides, Spanish-fashion. The next night in Balmain's black chiffon with a ruby jewelled yoke, her hairdo was tall and narrow.

Far from being an inanimate clothes horse, Perla Mattison is as much a man's as a woman's woman. She is one of the seductive girls, a list that stars Mrs. Leland Hayward and Mrs. Jack (Drue) Heinz.

Negative Tax Proposed

TORONTO (CP) — A negative income tax providing low-income families with a guaranteed minimum income of $1,500 was recommended Monday by the special committee on Ontario farm income.

The six-member committee described the negative income tax as a way of offering immediate relief to low-income families while long-range programs are developed to cure the economic imbalances in Canadian society.

The committee said the negative income tax should be paid to all poor people as part of an over-all attack on problems of poverty.

The report said its proposals need not greatly increase the tax burden on the working population.

"Much of it could be financed with the money now paid out in family allowances."

Book Details Unwelcome

LONDON (AP) — A bookseller said he received the following letter from a customer: "I am returning the book about mastery over women which I ordered 10 days ago. Unfortunately, my wife would not let me keep it."

U.K. Lenient On Lesbians

LOUGHBOROUGH, England (Reuters)—The founder of a club for lesbians estimated five per cent of British females are lesbians. Cynthia Reid, a university graduate who works for a computer firm, told a meeting of the Student Humanist Federation there is a growing tolerance in society toward lesbians.

Visits to Sick Curbed by Flu

PENTICTON (CP) — Officials of Summerland Hospital cancelled visiting hours at the institution because of an increase in the incidence of Hong Kong flu in the area.

Jet-Set Eva Strikes Out

LONDON (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau indicated Monday night that divorcee Eva Rittinghausen is a passing acquaintance whom he will not date again.

He said at a news conference that he does not suffer indiscreet women gladly.

He confirmed that he met the woman last summer at Murray Bay, Que.

Se first told reporters her married name was Rittinghausen but later said this was her maiden name. She then refused to give her married name but said she was born of German parents near Kentville, N.S.

She said she had been "in contact" with Trudeau since last August.

Trudeau said verbal contact can be made by telephone "and so forth and so on."

"My personal friends do not talk about me in public," the prime minister said. "If they do, they are not friends but passing acquaintances."

Miss Rittinghausen gave interviews in her opulent Belgravia flat to at least a dozen reporters after it was learned she was Trudeau's luncheon date Saturday.

She said she is a member of the international jet set and that she numbers among her friends Aristotle Onassis, Greek multimillionaire who married Jacqueline Kennedy last year.

She declined to say how she supports herself but did say that she has independent wealth. She said she does charitable work, such as part-time nursing.

She said Trudeau "makes you speak and he makes you show to him what you have to offer and then he may respond."

The prime minister was asked what "plans" he has for Miss Rittinghausen.

Trudeau said he should be asking the reporters. They had spent more time with her than he had, he added.

Asked whether the woman is a 1969 marriage possibility, Trudeau said, "I never discuss my private life publicly."

He was asked whom he will escort to Buckingham Palace today.

"I wouldn't give you her address," Trudeau replied.

He lunches with the Queen today and attends the Queen's dinner for Commonwealth leaders tonight.

Trudeau was asked the name of his Monday night date.

He replied: "A very nice girl and I'm sure she won't talk to you."

There was no indication whether Trudeau was serious about his last two replies.

Aides to Trudeau said he had not seen Miss Rittinghausen since last August when the two were introduced by Renalt St. Laurent, son of former prime minister Louis St. Laurent.

They said she had telephoned him in Ottawa a couple of times since then and that Trudeau had telephoned her Saturday when he arrived in London.

The newspaper quoted her as saying her meeting with Trudeau was love at first sight —"on both sides."

Later, she said:

"I did not say love at first sight. Maybe it's more like interest from both sides. We found out we have so many things in common like sports, yoga, swimming, diving and to some extent I'm interested in literature, where of course he's very well ahead as we all know. And I love to wear turtleneck sweaters as well."

Miss Rittinghausen said it was possible she would see Trudeau again before he leaves London. However, he indicated there was not the slightest possibility of this.

Miss Rittinghausen said: "I'm not the only woman in his life at the very moment. I'm sure there are two or three others involved, or interested in being married to him . . ."

She said she was born in Nova Scotia in 1933 and that she went to Germany when her parents returned there in 1939, just before the Second World War broke out.

She said she has three brothers in Canada and a 12-year-old son living in Europe.

She said one of her brothers "is one of the main farmers in Nova Scotia," one is an engineer and that another is the director of one of the main Vancouver hotels.

Walter Schaad, a farmer at Waldegrave, near Tatamagouche, N.S., said Miss Rittinghausen is a half-sister, and that he last saw her Dec. 19, outside Nova Scotia. He would not comment further.

"I happen to have been very ambitious all my life long," Miss Rittinghausen said.

"Not just any man could please me and it is just the enthusiasm, the ambition that is so strong in me that it would have to be someone very special I should show interest in."

She was asked whether she thought Trudeau might consider her indiscreet.

She replied: "I think it is only good for him what I have said."

She was proud to be a Canadian and Trudeau was the "man for Canada."

She loves turtlenecks, too

Rhode Island Ancestry

Socialite to Wed Negro?

NEW YORK (UPI) — Beryl Slocum, post-debutante daughter of one of America's first families, said Monday she and Adam Clayton Powell III, son of the Harlem congressman, are considering marriage.

"We're simply not sure yet," said the pretty 26-year-old blonde who counts Capt. Miles Standish and the founding fathers of Rhode Island among her ancestors.

Powell, 22, a local radio news reporter, said he had "no comment at this time." His father, reseated by Congress last week, has advised him to "take the Fifth Amendment" on the whole subject of a mixed marriage.

Miss Slocum's family, leaders of Newport, R.I., society, is opposed to the idea of marriage. Miss Slocum does not live with her parents. She reportedly met Powell, a recent graduate of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, about a year ago.

Powell is the preacher-legislator's son by his second wife, Negro pianist Hazel Scott. His paternal ancestry has never been fully established, but the senior Powell is believed to have had three white and one Cherokee Indian grandparents. His grandfather Powell, a Yale graduate, held the pulpit of Harlem's Abyssinian Baptist church and was succeeded by his son.

Miss Slocum is a descendant of Roger Williams and Chad Brown, founders of Rhode Island, Nicholas Brown, founder of Brown University, and George Gillespie, secretary of war under President McKinley. Her great-grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Willia Watts Sherman, were members of the original "400" who ruled society at the turn of the century.

THE FABRIC DOCTOR HAS THE ANSWERS

QUESTION:

Can Deodorants Damage Fabrics?
Mrs. B. T.

ANSWER:

Yes, many deodorants have chloride salts which cause deterioration of some fabrics, especially silk. Make sure deodorants are completely dry before allowing the garment to come in direct contact. If such a stain occurs, have the garment drycleaned as soon as possible.

9 IN MEMORIAM

HAYES—In loving memory of dear Dad and Grandpa, Maurice Edey Hayes, who passed away Jan. 7, 1967.

There is a loved one we will always remember,
A voice we will always recall,
Of one who was dear to us all.

—Ever remembered and sadly missed by his daughter Dorothy, son-in-law Ken and grandchildren — Patti, Warren and Blair.

ROBINSON — Treasured memories of my dearly beloved mother Ethel Maude Robinson who passed away suddenly Jan. 6, 1968.

Mother of ours, we loved you so,
We never wanted you to go,
God took your hand.
We had to part.
He eased your pain and broke our hearts.
Dear Lord, put your arms around her.
Hold her in they tender care,
Comfort her for all she suffered,
And everything that was unfair.
Those who have a mother,
Treasure her with care,
You'll never know how much you'll miss her,
Till you see her vacant chair.

SAWCHUK—In loving memory of my dear husband, Nickolas, died on Jan. 7, 1968.

Nothing can ever take away the love a heart holds dear,
Fond memories linger every day,
Remembrance keeps him dear.

—From his loving wife Anne, Brother, Mother and Sisters.

ABOUTTV

with Bruce Lowther

I think it's safe to say that the average Victoria viewer knocks CHECK-TV and the CBC but he or she rarely—if ever—gives the same criticism to a Seattle station or a U.S. network. I guess it's because an individual's interests spread from the individual out.

Whatever it is, I'd like to give CHEK-TV an Emmy for effort after Channel 6 went dead during Mark Twain Tonight Sunday, Dec. 29. It seems CHEK's man at its transmitter on Saturna Island found the cold had coagulated the diesel fuel that powers the engine that provides the power for CHEK's signal.

The fuel couldn't get into the motor. A decoagulation chemical had to be found, then sent to Saturna via helicopter. CHEK was back on the air late the next afternoon. I call that a noble effort.

BUREAU OF USELESS INFORMATION: Saturday's slippery answer—My memory book of commercials says the only thing you hear in a Rolls Royce is the clock, Pepsi beats the others cold, Courvoisier is the brandy of Napoleon, a man talks to his stomach for Alka Seltzer, and Dubs Dilworth used to blast the brakafrax for Gillette blades. Great, eh?

Today's question is more of the same, and mostly easy. What car hopes to win you over? Which pop star sings for that car? Look, ma, no cavities with what? And give the entire mid-1950s commercial that began, "I've got six seconds to sing." Answers Wednesday.

Tuesday Highlights

NOTE: Basketball on KING means some of the NBC evening run is on Channel 11 tonight.

C-1:30 p.m.—KVOS may show a half-hour film of the Montreal-St. Louis Stanley Cup hockey final last spring—12.

C-7:30—Jerry Lewis lists his guests as Nanette Fabray, Ed Platt, Engelbert Humperdinck—8, 11.

● C-9:00—The debut of NBC's much-heralded First Tuesday, a newsmagazine on the first Tuesday each month. Topics include Cuba, Rita Hayworth, Sinai Peninsula, Charles Atlas, the latest news—5.

C-9:00—British pop singer Tom Jones, who will shortly have an ABC series, has a special now. With Dick Cavett, Juliet Prowse—8.

9:00—NET Festival starts an eight-part run on contemporary movie-makers—9.

● C-10:00—Sixty Minutes, the CBS newsmagazine, is due to ask the question Has Success Spoiled Rown and Martin and the Smothers Brothers?—7.

Tuesday Movies

12:45 noon—Scandal Sheet (miserably-bad 1952 crime thing), Broderick Crawford's the baddie—6, 8.

2:00 p.m.—No title available, thank God—13.

4:30—Paid to Kill (poor 1954 English suspense), Dane Clark—13.

5:30—The Abductors (good 1957 bodysnatchers), Victor McLaglen, George Macready. No recommended movies Monday, today, Thursday or Friday, but two Wednesday. Hang on—12.

8:00—Ladies of Washington (1944 never)—13.

11:00—Meet the Girls (1938 don't bother)—13.

11:30—Lady Luck (1946 gambling vs. marriage), Robert Young, Barbara Hale; 6-5 love wins—7.

C-1:05 a.m.—Time of Their Lives (1956 comedy). Probably the best by Abbott and Costello—5.

1:30—Johnny Comes Flying Home (1946 disaster)—13.

3:00—City Girl (1938). Don't stay up; it stinks—13.

Tuesday Radio

7:00 p.m.—Pianist Geza Anda, the Southwest German Radio Orchestra: Schumann's concerto—CBU-FM (105.7)

8:00—CBC Tuesday Night features sea music and yarns—CBU (690).

8:05—Gala Performance: Pianist Samson Francois plays Ravel's concerto for the left hand—CFMS (98.5).

9:30—A concert by soprano Lois Marshall and the Gabora String Quartet—CBU.

Winning Contract

By HOWARD SCHENKEN and RICHARD L. FREY

This deal caused a furore among a group of regular readers and we are asked to say who was to blame for allowing a breakable contract to slip through.

It seems that West led the spade six against South's contract of five diamonds and dummy played low. East won the ace and declarer dropped the fourspot.

East computed that the contract would surely be icy unless West held the heart ace, so he fired back the queen of that suit. Unfortunately, after winning declarer's king with the ace, West didn't know which suit to play back. He eventually returned a heart and declarer was able to ruff and claim the contract, ditching his remaining spade on dummy's clubs.

Asked to apportion the guilt, or comment may surprise you. There is little doubt that East was the villain of the piece!

East was perfectly correct in assesing that the contract would be unbeatable unless West held the heart ace, but nevertheless he should have returned a spade!

From the play to the first trick, East can see that if West had opened his fourth-best spade, declarer is left with just one card higher than the six. This cannot be the king, for then West would hold J-10-9, and would have led the jack.

Since East knows, and West doesn't, that the defense can cash a second trick in spades, East should return the eight of that suit at trick two.

West can safely be relied upon to cash the heart ace at the next trick. He knows the declarer cannot be void of hearts, for with seven hearts and the spade ace East would surely not have stayed out of the bidding.

Nanaimo Mayor Looks to Future

Metro Development Urged

By ARNOLD OLSON

NANAIMO — A suggestion that amalgamation could help Nanaimo taxpayers was made by Frank Ney Monday when he gave his inaugural address to city council.

Mayor Ney said that as with other municipalities in Canada and the U.S., council had had to face up to the problem of inflation and still have progress.

PRUDENT POLICIES

"I believe this can be done by prudent fiscal policies and positive logical thinking.

"Some municipalities tend to sit back and look to other layers of government for help. Local government is the instrument for carrying out local policy but it must respond to a rapidly changing world. In this respect, amalgamation, or metro-government with other districts, is one way to cut out duplication of services and assist the taxpayer. All districts in our school district should now be working towards this end.

"Today in our country many administrators fear their ability to provide municipal services will decline unless the provincial or federal government, or both, free more funds to meet rising labor cost.

Nanaimo's labor cost increased from $451,000 in 1963 to $840,000 in 1967. During 1968, the rate, with increase, has been held to $875,000.

Politically you cannot get a real estate tax to respond to inflation. The day may be imminent where there may be a ½ of one per cent over-ride on income tax generated on an equitable formula for both business and bedroom municipalities.

"Be that as it may, it will be our duty and policy to continue to improve our own city government and strive for more efficiency at all levels. We look to 1969 with optimism, vigor and enthusiasm. We have great expectations of further commercial and industrial development within our environs and will do all we can to create a friendly and acceptable climate for new ventures. This is essential for increased employment and revenues within our city.

ACCOMPLISHMENT

Earlier, Mayor Ney complimented last year's council on its fresh ideas and speedy suggestions. He paid tribute to former mayor Pete Maffeo, who died last year, his council and previous councils "who laid a sound and firm foundation for the endeavors of the past year."

He described 1968 as a year of accomplishment.

Mayor Ney continued: "Our streets are beginning to have a new look and we must continue to improve in this sector. Our promenades, planters, causeways, new traffic safety precautions, Bowen Park recreational facilities and our new garbage and car dump improvements are all assisting in making Nanaimo not just a pleasant and proud place to live but one of the most exciting, clean and beautiful, smaller cities in Canada.

SPRING BYLAW

"I have visited 12 countries during the past few months and Nanaimo, for its size, stands out in magnificent fashion."

He said a spring bylaw, if approved, would mean "real headway on storm drains and the many roads in the city which still need improvement.

"We hope to have more planters, trees and emphasis on beautification, possibly a third promenade below Georgia Park and improvement of our boat ramp facilities. The George Pearson bridge should be finished and the Newcastle beach will become even more popular.

"Our city is in splendid financial shape with an approximate net debt of $3,500,000 compared with $7,000,000 borrowing power."

Later aldermen accepted a provisional budget of $4,944,452. Last year's final budget was $4,880,000.

They also gave first reading to an offstreet parking loan bylaw which would total $565,000 for a downtown area.

Morton Tells North Cowichan

Hard Work Ahead For Budget Planners

By KLAUS MUENTER

NORTH COWICHAN — An increase in North Cowichan's mill rate was indicated at Monday's inaugural meeting of council when aldermen received the provisional 1969 budget. It included a $292,157 increase, pushing the total of last year's revised budget to $3,773,678.

After questions from Ald. Gerry Smith, Mayor Donald Morton said there could be an increase of about two or three mills.

However he advised council that a precise forecast could not be made because "this is a very provisional budget and we still have to work hard on the annual budget.

"The annual budget will come down when we know the provincial government grants."

He said it might be decided before April and the tax blow might be softened by an increase to the value of one mill.

The annual budget may not be decided until April.

RISING COSTS

This year, one mill will probably produce $28,000. It provided $25,600 last year. Three main reasons for the provisional budget increase are public works, $137,175; protection to persons and property, $95,807; and general government, $46,450.

Municipal clerk, A. Vandecasteyen said: "The increase not only reflects the rising costs of materials and labor but also increased costs for extra services and specific projects."

He said that staff increases for administration, projects and maintenance was responsible for the jump in public works costs.

Mr. Vandecasteyen said an estimated $53,000 would be on hand as the municipal share of the total cost. The balance would be paid by the provincial government.

"We will have to do a considerable amount of thinking on the annual budget, and, no doubt, some agonizing decisions will have to be made," commented Ald. John Cannon.

Port Alberni Mayor

Council Unity Urged

By MARY TAYLOR

PORT ALBERNI — Mayor Fred Bishop in his 1969 inaugural meeting statement Monday night re-emphasized the importance he attached to council unity.

He said: "I cannot believe that unity requires that we always agree on every matter before us. Indeed, I do most emphatically believe we should disagree strongly when necessary, based on personal conviction and then abide by majority decision.

MATTERS OF POLICY

"Continued skirmishes for political advantage," he said, harm council's total image and result in individuals becoming more concerned with political defence and offence than spending every possible effort in thinking out and planning broad important matters of policy for the future development of our city."

The mayor proposed a number of innovations to increase the efficiency of the municipal administration.

He suggested greater use of written memos, smaller committees to speed up business, increased attention to civic employee training and the possibility of a central switchboard to handle phone calls to all municipal offices.

SEWAGE TREATMENT

Mayor Bishop said an immediate decision must be made on what level of sewage treatment will be required in 1969, and meetings must be set up with residents of the most critical unsewered areas to prepare for the earliest possible start on this work in 1969.

Continued emphasis on planning to ensure development along the best long range lines required consideration of new zoning bylaws and a new land use plan. Study of housing needs, now well underway, must be given high priority, the mayor said.

The mayor requested the works committee to meet at once this week to finalize plans and to recommend 1969 policy to council so that residents could pick up local improvement petitions as soon as possible.

FLOOD PROTECTION

The mayor said the long-promised Somass River-Kitsuksis Creek flood protection work should begin as soon as weather permitted. The mayor said the city had recent assurances from both the federal and provincial governments to that effect.

Water Extension Planned by Duncan

DUNCAN—A provisional 1969 budget, totalling $1,282,680, was received by Duncan aldermen at their first meeting of the year on Monday.

The budget, an increase on 1968's actual budget of $1,199,530, was tabled for further consideration.

In his inaugural address, Mayor Jim Quaife said: "The year 1969 will, like 1968, have its successes and failures. It is, however, the duty of each and every one of us to ensure that the successes far outweigh the failures."

INDIAN PROBLEMS

Discussing the year's successes, Mayor Quaife referred to better communication with North Cowichan, a better understanding of problems confronting Cowichan Indians, removal of surplus track within the city; installation of a third crossing at Queen's Road and Ingram Street and joint co-operation between city council, Cowichan band and local businessmen in removing the old agricultural hall.

He said proposed projects include an extension of the water system into South Cowichan, a more realistic approach to recreation.

He said a bylaw would be placed before voters in the late spring and an attempt would be made to raise money through public subscription.

The target will be $100,000.

"If the recreation commission doesn't go ahead, the city will take the initiative," said Mayor Quaife.

"During the past year, new members of council had an opportunity to come to grips with some very real problems; they now have their feet firmly placed, and 1969 will be a most challenging year, a year in which this council must forge ahead with new ideas and be prepared to carry them out."

MLA Robert Strachan wished the city success in the new year.

Ald. Tom Burge, representing North Cowichan, said: "A great step forward has been taken by the two councils inasmuch as they met on many occasions and discussed a great deal."

"Mayor Morton said although they have not always fully agreed there is one very good sign—"that is we are still talking."

Duncan magistrate Lance Heard conducted the swearing-in ceremony for one alderman, school board strustees, recreation commission members and advisory planning commission members. It was followed by an address by Rev. G. A. Kerr.

Fund Started

LAKE COWICHAN — Projects to provide financial help for heart transplant prospect Gerry Johnson of Royston continue to spring up.

Newest is a Gerry Johnson Heart Fund being sponsored by the Lake Cowichan Kinsmen.

Mr. Johnson, now undergoing tests in a Houston hospital to determine if his case is suitable for a heart transplant operation, was a long-time resident of Lake Cowichan before moving to Royston.

The Lake Cowichan Kinsmen started the fund with a donation of $100, and other contributions have raised the total so far to $289.

Donations may be sent to the Lake Cowichan Toronto-Dominion Bank, the Lake News or Ernie's store.

In Victoria, Kinsmen's Club executives were to meet tonight to discuss holding a giant bingo in Memorial Arena with the proceeds going to Mr. Johnson.

Results of the tests being conducted on Mr. Johnson in St. Luke's Episcopal Hospital, Houston, probably won't be known for about four or five days, Mrs. Johnson said Monday.

Hair Clipped Before Opening

ACAPULCO, Mexico (UPI) — Mexico Monday expelled 13 American and two British members of the cast of the Broadway rock musical Hair, closed down Saturday by city authorities before it even officially opened.

Immigration authorities rounded up the cast members Sunday and made them sign written pledges to leave Mexico within 24 hours. Three were reported to have left by air for Los Angeles, while the rest chartered a bus to get across the border.

Mexican and American producers of the Acapulco version of Hair meanwhile sought to salvage the $80,000 they had in it.

Mexican co-producer Alfredo Elias Calles, grandson of a former president of Mexico, said authorities had given no reason for closing down the production. He said he thought it might be possible to straighten out the matter and open later.

The play has a scene in which the cast members appear nude.

Cyclamen Care

By M. V. CHESNUT

To me, the most charming and graceful of all our winter-flowering gift houseplants is the Persian cyclamen which, in spite of its name, comes originally not from Iran but from the Grecian islands of the eastern Mediterranean.

The flowers, like delicately poised tropical butterflies, are most commonly in a distinctive deep pink shade, although there is a pure white variety for which I have a special affection.

If one of these lovely plants came to live at your house on Christmas morning, undoubtedly you will be wondering whether the bulb can be saved and grown to bloom another year.

This is possible, although it is always something of a gamble, for the cyclamen is unpredictable in whether it will make a comeback after its annual resting period. Because the bulbs are such uncertain starters, the cyclamen plants of commerce are always raised from seed, taking two years to come into bloom.

Your first consideration, though, will be how to keep your gift plant healthy, happy and blooming for as long as possible, and the most important factor here is the room temperature. These are cool weather plants, and their blooming period is shortened considerably in an overheated room.

In its Mediterranean home it blooms almost all winter, dying down and going dormant when the weather becomes hot. In the home, it will bloom at least twice as long at 60 degrees as at 70.

The plant thrives under about the same light conditions as an African violet — plenty of light, but not much hot, direct sunshine. An east window seems to suit it well, where it gets morning sunshine; a south or west window isn't too bright for it during the dull days of winter.

Watering a cyclamen is a bit tricky, for a big plant with lots of leaves is a hound for water, especially if the room is warm. By the same token, the bulb and its roots will rot in soggy, sodden soil.

Best way is to feel the soil daily with the fingertips but wait until it is definitely dry to the touch before watering, then give enough to moisten the soil all the way through. Apply the water around the edge of the pot, avoiding the bulb in the middle. Do not allow the drainage water to stand in the saucer for any great length of time.

As each flower fades, take it off before it can set seed, as seed-making is an exhausting process which would tend to weaken the bulb. Don't cut the flower stem, but pull it out with a twisting jerk, steadying the pot with your free hand. In this way, no stub of stem is left to rot back.

When your plant appears to be tiring and produces no more flower buds, it is time to induce dormancy by "weaning" it — by reducing gradually the amount and frequency of watering. Too sudden a cut-off is too much of a shock; the idea is to ease it gently into its resting period.

When the leaves show signs of wilting and dying, quit watering entirely and store the plant in its pot in the basement. When the topgrowth is quite dead and dry, cut it down to soil level.

Next August, shake the bulb out of its pot and repot into fresh soil — any kind which will grow good African violets will suit the cyclamen. Plant shallowly, making sure the bulb is right side up. Bring to a cool east or north window, water sparingly, keep your fingers crossed and hope for the best.

ART BUCHWALD Hands Baton to PETER USTINOV

All the World's a Stage

(Art Buchwald has the flu and the last thing he gasped was, "Use the Peter Ustinov column.")

Peter Ustinov, the British actor and playwright, was in Paris and I happened to discuss different methods of presenting a divorce problem to an English, a French and an American theatre audience.

To give an example, let's make up a scene from a play as the English would do it:

GEORGE: Jessie.

JESSIE: Mmm'm.

GEORGE: There's something I've been meaning to ask you for some time (about two and a half acts in fact).

JESSIE: (hard) Yes, George.

GEORGE: I . . . that is . . . I don't know how you're quite going to take this.

JESSIE: I think I know what you're going to say.

GEORGE: How uncanny.

JESSIE: But it's too late now.

GEORGE: I suppose it is. Whisky?

JESSIE: I don't mind if I do.

GEORGE: I imagine it was my fault in a way.

JESSIE: Don't blame yourself, George.

GEORGE: Soda?

JESSIE: Just a dash.

GEORGE: How's that? (Holding up a glass.)

JESSIE: Dear George. That's fine.

JESSIE: Never.

GEORGE: Well, thank God for that.

JESSIE: Why do you say that?

GEORGE: There is no more ice. (Sits down heavily.) No more anything.

"The French, on the other hand, would play the scene differently," said Ustinov.

GEORGE: Cherie.

JESSIE: Oui mon petit chou.

GEORGE: I have something to tell you. I have a mistress.

JESSIE: You are only telling me something I have known for two years.

GEORGE: No, I mean a new mistress.

JESSIE: But what will happen to Maria?

GEORGE: I don't know.

JESSIE: The poor thing. I'll take her to the collections.

GEORGE: (Reproachfully) Please do. You never were very nice to her.

JESSIE: (More Reproachfully) You never brought her around.

GEORGE: I suppose you are right.

JESSIE: Is she much prettier than I am?

GEORGE: Much prettier.

JESSIE: I'm glad. Otherwise, I would have been jealous.

GEORGE: Where are you going?

JESSIE: I'll see you next week.

GEORGE: Is Pierre in town?

JESSIE: I don't know, but Leon is.

GEORGE: Who's Leon?

JESSIE: My, how possessive you've become.

"The Americans, on the other hand, are more for the stark realism of the thing," said Ustinov. "A saxophone must be playing nine blocks away and a kid is crying across the road."

GEORGE: Jessie, I have something to tell you.

JESSIE: I want a divorce.

GEORGE: But you haven't heard what I've got to say.

GEORGE: But for crying out loud . . .

JESSIE: Mother said it would happen this way.

GEORGE: But . . .

JESSIE: Let's not discuss it. It's vulgar and I'm not interested in the details.

GEORGE: Will you shut up . . .

JESSIE: Don't raise your voice, George.

GEORGE: I just wanted to say . . .

JESSIE: Whatever it is, I'm sure the lawyers will be able to settle it.

GEORGE: Settle what?

JESSIE: Let's be friends. The children will never have to know.

GEORGE: Where are you going?

JESSIE: Reno, Mexico City, Tucson. I'll send you a postcard. And I hope you'll be very happy.

GEORGE: (Sitting down heavily) Never thought about it. Maybe I will.

HOLLYWOOD (NANA)—Peter Sellers celebrated the New Year by selling his house in the country to Beattle Ringo Starr. His ex-wife Britt Ekland will live in Rome, where she hopes to land in a Fellini picture. The Italian director's problems with Satyricon, incidentally, stem from the promise of his producer to put up half the money, and his current hesitation about doing so.

Franco Zeffirelli's New Year's greeting card reminded me of how excellently he had directed the film version of Romeo and Juliet. This beautifully-made film is sure to be one of the five Oscar nominations for the best picture of 1968.

You don't think of Jack Palance as a Boy Scout type, but he worked with Omar Sharif in Che with a temperature of 102, so that the picture could be finished in time for the holidays. Poor Palance. In addition to the Hong Kong flu, he picked up poison oak on his arms while filming at 20th Century Fox's ranch.

Did Lee Marvin marry his long-time girl, Michele? T'would seem so. I am told she has opened several charge accounts in Beverly Hills under the name of Michele Marvin. Lee can afford it. He has 10 per cent of the gross from Paint Your Wagon, and there's nothing gross about that.

Nancy Sinatra's record royalties from Reprise, owned by her daddy, topped her famous father's record payments for 1968 — a cool $900,000. Nancy was topped by Petula Clark who went over the $1,000,000 mark.

Cold Turkey is about everyone of smoking age in a small town attempting to give up smoking. Naturally they all get very fat and very nervous.

Nary a Friend in Ottawa for Forces

By RICHARD JACKSON
Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA—In the strange vacuum that descends upon this quiet capital when Parliament is in recess, Prime Minister Trudeau last week dropped still another bomb on the already shell shocked armed forces.

He has told them they have, in his own words, "a serious problem of morale," and he has managed in his causal way to compound it.

He has informed them that, in the context of his defence and foreign affairs review, they may feel like ths staff of a firm going out of business.

Almost carelessly, certainly in his airy, offhand manner he doesn't say they are—but just as casually he doesn't say they aren't. And then he adds that there isn't much he can do about it for "months" yet.

The armed forces—at least that select circle of them here at headquarters—are getting a clear signal, the way they read it, that they are at a worse discount than ever before.

They even could be expendable.

They haven't had a friend in power on Parliament Hill since the days when Maj.-Gen. George Pearkes and then Colonel Douglas Harkness were defence ministers.

And nothing for the navy, army and air force has been the same since, except their continued occupation of their headquarters in Ottawa's rotting wartime "temporary" buildings.

But the prime minister's bomb has exploded among the 98,000 servicemen—and, this being the kind of a captive civil service city it is, with the politicians all on holiday at home or on junkets around the world—with no repercussions.

The opposition defence critics are away.

Even the few Liberals who dare to speak up for the armed forces are at home. Even Defence Minister Leo Cadieux is absent (of course with leave).

He denies even the prime minister had suggested it did—although he hedges his denial with the qualification that he will have to "look up the transcript."

Well, the transcript has been looked up for him—and it shows that, while the prime minister didn't directly say that unification had hurt morale, he unquestionably did imply it.

When the unifiers were undermining the services, Hellyer made two big selling points:

● The world would stand in awe of Canada's daring innovation and hurry to Ottawa to see how it had been done.

● The taxpayers would save millions.

The answer to point one is that not even The Congo has come here for a look.

The reply to point two is that defence costs are still increasing, despite the "human sacrifice" the government is trying to make of the forces in the hope of having something more to spend on "do-gooding" everywhere except here at home.

The defence budget for 1968-69 is up $2,500,000 from the last fiscal year to 1.7 billion.

During the unification debate, Hellyer boasted frequently of the distinguished military figures from the U.S., U.K. and Europe who had come hot-footing it to Ottawa to see unification in action.

Apparently they weren't converted. Leading U.K. defence experts, including Lord Louis Mountbatten himself said unification of Britain's forces would only come over his dead body.

United States military men were just as scornful of Hellyeresque unification although less blunt in condemning it.

Not even the struggling African states, with only rudimentary armed services—largely trained by Canada as in Ghana and Tanzania—have been able to see merit in unification.

Hellyer may have sold his former boss, Lester Pearson, on the virtues of a unified band of jolly green giants but apparently he hasn't convinced Peacenik Pierre.

What may be inferred from the prime minister's remarks is that we bought less bang for more bucks—and "bangs" are outmoded anyway in today's world.

At the moment there are whispers in the corridors of power that the prime minister, hankering for what he calls "some new kind of initiative abroad," is meeting some opposition in the cabinet.

Cadieux was outraged, and clearly showed it, when he denied scornfully anyone was going to turn the armed forces into some kind of global police to keep the international peace.

It failed in the Mideast where the UN pulled out the Canadian peacekeepers at the snap of Egyptian Colonel Nasser's fingers. And it has been costing $12,000,000 a year since back in the early Pearson years for Canadian taxpayers to have their servicemen police Cyprus.

External Affairs Minister Sharp, so the cabinet leaks have it, has been supporting Cadieux. He is under pressure from his diplomats in our European embassies that it would be unthinkable for Canada to get out of NATO.

But the prime minister has said that we don't have to defend ourselves—the Americans will do it for us. And this, he goes on, leaves us free to explore those "other initiatives."

The prime minister dealt with the armed forces issue and the question of the diplomatic corps in a CBC interview the other night.

It begins when he is asked how soon he will wrap up his review of defence and diplomacy.

"No, we're not about ready. I think it will take some more months. How many exactly I don't know and I'm sorry about that aspect.

"It's quite true I think there is a serious problem of morale in the servicemen and their families, um, they have been, uh, disturbed by the, uh, armed forces unification a few years ago and now they're being told that we don't know what the future of the army is or the navy or the airmen, we don't know what Canada, what role, Canada will want to play and there are in the services, uh, very intelligent, very active and very, uh, energetic people. They want to know what the future is. If you worked for a big corporation and you were told, well, maybe, next year we'll go out of business, or maybe next year we'll cut all operations or, uh, you'd be trying to assess where you'd go from here and this I regret, um.

"I can do nothing to reassure the people in the armed services beyond saying that, uh, they are very grossly underrated and undervalued by the average Canadian.

"I know that we have very good people in the armed forces and many of them are working at the armed forces review now and they're asking basic questions about what their role should be.

"It's, uh, it's perhaps a difficult time. I can only say that whatever decisions are reached will be reached with the intention of furthering the common weal, furthering the society which Canadians hold best."

And here is the prime ministerial transcript of his assessment downgrading diplomacy:

"The whole concept of diplomacy as a career is a little bit outmoded. Um, I believe much of it goes back to the early days of, uh, telegraph when you needed a dispatch to know what was happening in a country, ah, as now most of the time you can read it in a good newspaper.

"In that sense I believe there's a need for a basic examination of the function of the diplomat.

"I think that it should be much more, much closer, to the people in the way you suggest. I think it should be more culture-oriented, more news-oriented.

"By this we still get down to a point where we will realize that we do need posts in many countries and we do need diplomats who can speak to the government officials in those countries because, that's not often, perhaps once or twice, or perhaps three times a year.

"We will need somebody urgently to tell the president of country X or the prime minister of country B 'this is a situation we want to know your reaction to' and they will be able to convey it to us so. Everytime we have to send a crew of ministers down from Ottawa, or a diplomat from Ottawa, you know we'd probably spend more money but we'd be less informed. But I accept your basic, uh, criticism."

Prime, Island Timber Will Show Off B.C.

Tall timber will reflect B.C.'s image at Expo 70 in Osaka, Japan where the backdrop of the provincial pavilion will feature more than 100 prime Douglas fir logs, some towering 160 feet.

All the logs are from the southern half of Vancouver Island and provided free by three member companies of the Council of Forest Industries of B.C.

The largest logs came from trees more than 200 feet high. Some of them were nearly six feet through at the butt end and were more than 400 years old.

The giants required two logging trucks in tandem to get them from the woods to the water dump area. The logs were towed to Vancouver and shippped in November by lumber carrier to Japan.

The pavilion will contain a theatre which will show films describing the province. Extending nearly the full length of the pavilion site will be a lake and waterfall area, a mining exhibit and other displays depicting B.C.'s industrial, agricultural and recreational activities.

Considerable care was taken in felling the huge trees because it was important that the bark be undamaged.

To minimize damage, special procedures and equipment were used in the felling operations. In several cases, winches and other gear was used to gingerly lower them to the ground. In others special beds of springy boughs were established as cushions for the falling timber.

"We expect this towering log structure will be regarded as a highlight of the world fair. Its unique exterior design will undoubtedy trigger an immediate interest and curiosity which in turn will attract large crowds to its displays and other interior features," said John Southworth, B.C. Commissioner to Expo 70.

Jay Treaty Never Accepted

Indians Told Rights Issue Under Long Examination

OTTAWA (CP) — A federal cabinet minister Monday told a group of Indians demanding ancient treaty rights that the whole subject of Indian treaties is under examination.

Robert Andras, minister without portfolio, said, however, that quick government action on treaty obligations is neither likely nor possible. Action was months away.

He spoke in his Commons office to a six-man delegation from the St. Regis Indian reserve near Cornwall, Ont.

The six had taken part in a demonstration Sunday protesting the right of the Canadian government to impose duty on U.S. goods brought back by Indians across the international bridge at Cornwall.

According to their claim, the 1794 Jay Treaty between the U.S. and Britain gave Indians duty exemption.

ACT REQUIRED

Andras, who has special responsibilities in Indian affairs, said he could not restore rights under the Jay treaty, which has never been ratified by Parliament.

No single person in the country has that power, he told the delegation. It would require a cabinet decision and an act of Parliament.

The whoe subject of Indian treaties is under discussion by the cabinet. But Andras said he wanted to be frank.

"I don't know when, if ever, the Jay treaty will be instituted," he said.

REQUEST DENIED

Andras further declined an Indian request for a meeting with a federal official to discuss the treaty and other problems of the St. Regis reserve. He offered to meet with them himself on future occasions.

He said the federal government has consulted Indian representatives on new Indian policy and will try to work out better methods of consultation.

The whole question of treaties must be negotiated, he said.

As for the Jay treaty, it never was recognized by the Canadian government.

"That's a fact," he said. "I'm not saying whether it is fair or unfair."

Frank Thomas, one of the delegation, said later that Andras "seems to talk pretty fair," but the Indians back home and himself too were getting impatient with delay.

Warships Head South

The destroyer escorts Mackenzie and Yukon sailed for southern waters Monday for a rendezvous with the U.S. navy and visits to Central America.

Exercises in anti-submarine warfare with ships and planes of the U.S. navy will be performed off the Southern California coast. During the cruise sailors of the two ships will take part in the celebration of San Diego's bicentennial birthday.

The ships will return to Esquimalt Feb. 28, after stops at Acajuto, El Salvador; Punta Arenas, Costa Rica; Balboa, Canal Zone; Corinto, Nicaragua, and Amapalo, Honduras.

Stephen Sees Incentive
For Non-Profit Groups

Pump-Priming Fund Urged for City Housing

Mayor Bares Plans for '69

By DESMOND BILL

Mayor Hugh Stephen proposed Monday that Victoria set up a $150,000 pump-priming fund that could result in construction of $3,000,000 worth of low-rental housing in the city.

It would be used to help non-profit organizations such as church groups, unions and service clubs willing to sponsor housing projects.

The mayor suggested the money be given to such groups for up to 5 per cent of the cost of a project. The groups would raise the other 5 per cent required as a down payment and the balance of 90 per cent would come from NHA loans.

It was the major new initiative that he proposed in his inaugural address to the first meeting of this year's council.

But his speech — which took him one hour and 20 minutes to read — also reviewed practically every aspect of the city's business during 1968.

It ranged from a warning about the "frightening" increase in glue-sniffing among juveniles to delight over the "astounding" increase in assessments.

Among the mayor's proposals for this year were:

- A new zoning concept for downtown development.
- Finishing the enclosure of Bowker Creek inside Victoria's boundaries.
- Construction of a new wading pool in Beacon Hill Park.
- A new method for drawing up the city's operating budget.
- Provision of funds to enable police to travel to other provinces and arrest men who desert their wives and ignore court orders to maintain them and their families.

The mayor said his proposals were necessarily fewer than usual because major programs must await preparation of a new five-year capital budget that will not be drawn up until later this year.

Twice in his speech he was critical of the provincial government.

He deplored its refusal "to make even a token start" on the new Patricia Bay Highway. One result has been that the city's new north-south artery, Rose Street, "ends in nothing at our boundaries, whence all the traffic funnels back again on to an already overcrowded Douglas Street."

And he said the government's new driver demerit system had more than doubled the court load of cases, which would result in additional costs, coupled with a loss of revenue from the former system of fines. He said that if municipalities were to continue to pay local court costs then they must either be given a government subsidy or allowed to levy costs against drivers receiving demerits.

The mayor said he spent more time working on sewage disposal problems than any other subject during last year, but, despite increased regional cooperation, the issue was still at an impasse.

He said this was because the proposal to discharge sewage into the ocean had generated more "emotional and subjective" opinion than any other issue. Patience and restraint would be necessary to solve it, he said.

President's Pay Packet Doubled to $200,000

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The House of Representatives voted Monday to double the pay of the president — from $100,000 to $200,000 — effective with Richard Nixon's inauguration despite an economizer's contention the president-elect did not want his salary boosted.

In addition to his taxable salary, the president would continue to receive a taxable $50,000 to cover expenses and nontaxable $40,000 for other travel and entertainment expenses. Congress appropriates separate funds to operate the White House.

Sirhan Trial Starts Today

All indications were that the trial would open as scheduled at 9:30 a.m. today despite the discussions in the chambers of Superior Judge Herbert Walker, who will hear the lengthy proceedings.

Judge Walker said the closed meeting was called to "clear up certain pre-trial matters." He said that if any motions were made they would be disclosed later.

The trial will be in an armor-plated eighth floor courtroom, where windows have been covered with sheets of steel.

Jury selection is expected to take up the first two weeks of the trial, which may last two months or longer. More than 200 witnesses may be called, including the defendant's mother.

Position on Rhodesia

Promise to Blacks Backed by Canada

LONDON (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau lined up with President Kenneth Kaunda of Zambia Monday in opposing any weakening in Britain's original promise to the black Rhodesians.

Trudeau said at a news conference that he and Kaunda at a 75-minute meeting affirmed that their backing for the principle that Britain must not give legal independence to Rhodesia before the Africans are given majority rule in that white-supremacy country.

OPPOSITE VIEW

Trudeau said Sunday that Britain has departed from its original commitment to the black Rhodesians—no independence before majority rule for them.

He has said that all arguments on the issue have been exhausted and that it is largely an illusion that the Commonwealth could settle it.

Rhodesia will be discussed at the conference but the Nigeria-Biafra war is not on the agenda.

DEFENCE DISCUSSED

They discussed Anglo-Canadian defence, foreign, trade and economic affairs.

Informants said Wilson tried to persuade Trudeau to maintain Canada's commitment on the North Atlantic Treaty Organization.

NATO is not on the Commonwealth meeting agenda, but the informants said Wilson made a determined bid to win an assurance that Canada would continue its role in Europe's defence.

Trudeau said Wilson and his colleagues did not look flustered or in the least disturbed by the fact that Canada is reviewing

Tragedy Like Tragedy

BRADFORD, Pa. (AP) — An Allegheny Airlines propjet crashed while trying to land in a light snow Monday night, almost precisely the same way a sister flight crashed here two weeks ago.

Eleven of the 28 persons aboard were killed. Of the 17 survivors one was in critical condition.

FLIPS OVER

The Convair 580, Flight 737 which originated in Washington and stopped in Harrisburg, crashed into 15 inches of snow on a golf course and flipped upside down. That was the same way Flight 736 went down Christmas Eve, killing 20. Twenty seven survived.

A spokesman for Allegheny Airlines, which has lost only three planes in its history, said there was no immediate explanation for the similarities.

The flight was running an hour late because of a winter storm that swept through the state.

The Christmas Eve tragedy also happened on the heels of a winter storm. The plane went down in an icy marsh midway up a mountain about three miles south of the airport. It skidded several hundred feet, then flopped on its back, leaving some survivors hanging from their seatbelts.

Police Intervention

Professors Say 'March In'

LONDON (CP) — Seven Canadian professors have urged a declaration of Canadian readiness "to consider with like-minded Commonwealth members whether the time has come for international police intervention" in Rhodesia.

But such readiness should not involve any pre-judging of the issue either way, the Canadian academics add.

All professors of the social sciences, they also call on Prime Minister Trudeau to reaffirm the principle of no independence for Rhodesia without African majority rule.

The teachers make their statements in a letter to The Times today.

Signatories of the letter are Gerald Caplin of the Ontario Institute of Education; Frank Chalk of Sir George Williams, Peter Gutkind of McGill and Donald Savage of Loyola, all Montreal universities; and Gerald Helleiner, David Nowlan and Cranford Pratt, all of the University of Toronto.

The signatories say they all have "African experience."

Building Help Easier

By IAN STREET

British Columbians in future will be able to get a promise in writing that the government will provide them with a $1,000 home acquisition grant so that they can use it in arranging financing of a new home.

Municipal Affairs Minister Dan Campbell announced Monday that although the actual grant will continue to be made only when the owner is in occupancy provincial housing authorities will provide a letter of intent to those who meet requirements.

Under regulations in effect until now, persons seeking the grant had to occupy the house before making application for the $1,000. The new system will let owners pre-qualify in what Mr. Campbell said was an all-out drive to increase the number of new housing starts in the province this spring.

Latest figures, made public last week, showed housing starts in major B.C. municipalities in the first 10 months of 1968 increased 6 per cent over the corresponding period in the record year of 1967. Units completed were 23 per cent higher than the same period in 1967.

Home builders who qualify for the provincial grants, Mr. Campbell said, can use the letter of intent obtained from the housing administration to obtain greater flexibility in financing. "We want to give it a lift now," he added, "to permit more housing starts to get under way in the spring."

Meanwhile, provincial housing officials disclosed that a total of 43,800 home acquisition grants have been made since the program began April 1, 1966.

Although there is no official breakdown, it is estimated that approximately 75 per cent of the grants were for the $500 initial amount, which applied to both new and existing homes and was dropped last July.

Closed-Lips 'Nice Girl' Trudeau's Dinner Date

LONDON (CP)—Prime Minister Trudeau went dining and dancing with an English girl Monday night at a swinging discotheque in affluent Berkeley Square.

The girl was not Eva Rittinghausen, a self-described jet-set divorcee whom Trudeau took to lunch Saturday.

Trudeau said Monday in reply to questions about his relationship with Miss Rittinghausen that he does not suffer indiscreet women gladly. She had given a dozen or so interviews about her meeting with the prime minister.

Trudeau also said earlier Monday that he was going to date "a very nice girl and I'm sure she won't talk to you." The "you" meant reporters.

His Monday night date was described by one of his aides as a university graduate about 30 or 32 years old whom Trudeau had known for a couple of years. The aide declined to give her name.

Trudeau and his date were accompanied by Gordon Gibson, his executive assistant, and Gibson's wife.

Motorist Injured In Bridge Crash

CAMPBELL RIVER — Donald Fontaine, 20, of Kelsey Bay, was said to be in good condition in St. Joseph's Hospital, Victoria, after receiving head injuries in a Sayward Valley accident Jan. 5.

Police said his car apparently went out of control on the White River bridge and crashed through a guard rail.

He was taken to Campbell River hospital and later transferred to Victoria.

James Donald Sutherland, 24 of Campbell River was fined $350 in Campbell River magistrate's court and had his licence suspended for the month for dangerous driving.

Sutherland was observed driving at high rates of speed and causing his car to go out of control in the main business area of Campbell River.

Joseph Clooten, 50 of Campbell River was fined $250 and had his licence suspended for two months for driving while impaired.

The Campbell River fire department reports a small fire occurred Jan. 5 at the residence of Peter Laverine on 9th Ave. The blaze, of unknown origin in a separate garage, was detected early and promptly put out.

Banned BBC Film Part of Festival

GOLD RIVER—The controversial BBC film War Games will be screened during Gold River's first film festival.

The festival starts on Wednesday and will continue on Jan. 15 and Jan. 22. It has been organized as part of an adult education program.

The films will be shown in Gold River senior secondary school, said P. G. Ellwood, director of adult education.

War Games was made for the BBC which refused to show it because officials felt some of the scenes were unsuitable for family viewing.

It deals with a nuclear attack.

On Wednesday there will be two films — Malcolm X, a Black Power documentary and Night and Fog which discusses concentration camps. The program starts at 8 p.m.

Byelection Candidate

Flu No Barrier To Campaigning

NANAIMO — The flu-stricken progressive Conservative candidate for Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands has said he did not intend to slacken his campaigning for the Feb. 10 byelection just because he was not able to make public appearances.

In a New Year statement, Dr. Magnus Verbrugge said voters in most of Canada's other constituencies were not getting the opportunity for a second look.

He added, however, that he regretted the death of NDP member Colin Cameron was the occasion for the opportunity.

"Never before in the history of Canada has there been so much poverty in the midst of plenty. Never has there been such a rise in employment and unemployment at the same time. Never have there been so many Canadians on low pensions and substandard wages at the same time as so large a group has been receiving high incomes.

"Never before have prices and profits skated so high during a period when so many Canadians were unable to afford them.

"Never before in Canadian history have so many tax increases been levied against so many ordinary people to support so many wasteful government schemes and never before has there been so great a need for a strong, effective and stable opposition in the House of Parliament," he said.

He said the Liberals claimed they had not previously been able to institute policies because the strong Opposition forces in 1963 thwarted their every effort.

"We were lied to," he asserted.

Cubs Czeched

Recreation Levy Wanted

NANAIMO — Harewood Improvement District's recreation commission will hold a ratepayers' meeting at 8 p.m. Jan. 13 in the firehall to discuss a plebiscite for a $15 annual recreation levy.

The commission has circulated a letter entitled Four Cents a Day, which it says would be the cost of providing proper recreation.

Commissioner Dick Herliveaux said: "We've been frustrated in the past few years by not being able to go ahead with development.

He said Harewood already had about 80 acres set aside for recreation, but money shortages restricted development.

He said the proposed levy, based on a five-year development budget, would be paid by all ratepayers except old age pensioners.

Nanaimo Mayor Looks to Future

Metro Development Urged To Cut Area Duplication

By ARNOLD OLSON

NANAIMO — A suggestion that amalgamation could help Nanaimo taxpayers was made by Frank Ney Monday when he gave his inaugural address to city council.

Mayor Ney said that as with other municipalities in Canada and the U.S., council had had to face up to the problem of inflation and still have progress.

PRUDENT POLICIES

"I believe this can be done by prudent fiscal policies and positive logical thinking.

"Some municipalities tend to sit back and look to other layers of government for help. Local government is the instrument for carrying out local policy but it must respond to a rapidly changing world. In this respect, amalgamation, or metro-government with other districts, is one way to cut out duplication of services and assist the taxpayer. All districts in our school district should now be working towards this end.

"Today in our country many administrators fear their ability to provide municipal services will decline unless the provincial or federal government, or both, free more funds to meet rising labor cost.

PROPERTY TAX

Nanaimo's labor cost increased from $451,000 in 1963 to $840,000 in 1967. During 1968, the rate, with increase, has been held to $875,000.

Politically you cannot get a real estate tax to respond to inflation. The day may be imminent where there may be a ½ of one per cent over-ride on income tax generated on an equitable formula for both business and bedroom municipalities.

"Be that as it may, it will be our duty and policy to continue to improve our own city government and strive for more efficiency at all levels. We look to 1969 with optimism, vigor and enthusiasm. We have great expectations of further commercial and industrial development within our environs and will do all we can to create a friendly and acceptable climate for new ventures. This is essential for increased employment and revenues within our city.

ACCOMPLISHMENT

Earlier, Mayor Ney complimented last year's council on its fresh ideas and speedy suggestions. He paid tribute to former mayor Pete Maffeo, who died last year, his council and previous councils "who laid a sound and firm foundation for the endeavors of the past year."

He described 1968 as a year of accomplishment.

Mayor Ney continued: "Our streets are beginning to have a new look and we must continue to improve in this sector. Our promenades, planters, causeways, new traffic safety precautions, Bowen Park recreational facilities and our new garbage and car dump improvements are all assisting in making Nanaimo not just a pleasant and proud place to live but one of the most exciting, clean and beautiful, smaller cities in Canada.

SPRING BYLAW

"I have visited 12 countries during the past few months and Nanaimo, for its size, stands out in magnificent fashion."

He said a spring bylaw, if approved, would mean "real headway on storm drains and the many roads in the city which still need improvement.

"We hope to have more planters, trees and emphasis on beautification, possibly a third promenade below Georgia Park and improvement of our boat ramp facilities. The George Pearson bridge should be finished and the Newcastle beach will become even more popular.

"Our city is in splendid financial shape with an approximate net debt of $3,500,000 compared with $7,000,000 borrowing power."

PROVISIONAL BUDGET

Later aldermen accepted a provisional budget of $4,944,452. Last year's final budget was $4,880,000.

They also gave first reading to an offstreet parking loan bylaw which would total $565,000 for a downtown area.

A two-mill tax would be levied on real property owners in the affected area to retire the loan over a 20-year period. The proposed bylaw would levy the tax on a base of 75 per cent of assessed value.

Land purchases would require $183,000 with the balance of $382,000 for development for five sites.

Somass Mill

Sawyers Sent Home

PORT ALBERNI—Five-day suspensions have been handed to sawyers in the shingle mill of MacMillan Bloedel's Somass division.

Once again union officials have described the action as a lockout while the company has charged that there has been an illegal slowdown.

IWA local 1—85 officials said the afternoon shift of sawyers was suspended at about 10 p.m. Friday. The graveyard shift sawyers were suspended at about 6 a.m. Monday, and the dayshift at 1:30 Monday.

"Management's excuse for the lockout is that the shingle sawyers were not producing enough," said Maurice Corbeil, local secretary.

He repeated the statement made by the union when a similar shutdown took place Nov. 28.

"Shingle sawyers and packers are paid on a piece-work basis and the shingle sawyers and packers are the only ones to determine the number of shingles that can be safely produced in a shift.

DAY'S WORK

"Quotas of production have never been negotiated with respect to shingle sawyers' and packers' productivity and management has no right whatsoever to unilaterally set production quotas for piece-workers.

"We have always insisted that all management can, and should expect from the workmen, is an honest day's work. And at no time do we intend, as representatives of the workers, to negotiate quotas of production for our members, whether piece-workers or hourly paid employees, said Mr. Corbeil.

'FEEBLE EXCUSE'

Mr. Corbeil claimed that the company had used "the same feeble excuse in an attempt to put pressure on the crew to increase production thereby increasing the company's profits because of the very lucrative profits and market condition in the shingle industry."

A company statement said: "The second slowdown by shingle sawyers at Somass division has compelled the company to again to suspend the offenders for not maintaining their regular production standard.

"When the slowdown became apparent, management advised the crew that the company could not tolerate this illegal action."

NORMAL MANNER

"The company will permit the men to return to work after suspension, if they are prepared to live up to the terms of the collective agreement.

"The company expects the union to instruct its members to carry out their duties in a normal manner when they return to work."

In November sawyers were suspended until "further notice" and lost only two days work. They returned to full production Dec. 2.

South Cowichan Scheme

Water Extension Planned by Duncan

DUNCAN—A provisional 1969 budget, totalling $1,282,680, was received by Duncan aldermen at their first meeting of the year on Monday.

The budget, an increase on 1968's actual budget of $1,199,530, was tabled for further consideration.

In his inaugural address, Mayor Jim Quaife said: "The year 1969 will, like 1968, have its successes and failures. It is, however, the duty of each and every one of us to ensure that the successes far outweigh the failures."

INDIAN PROBLEMS

Discussing the year's successes, Mayor Quaife referred to better communication with North Cowichan, a better understanding of problems confronting Cowichan Indians, removal of surplus track within the city, installation of a third crossing at Queen's Road and Ingram Street and joint co-operation between city council, Cowichan band and local businessmen in removing the old agricultural hall.

He said proposed projects include an extension of the water system into South Cowichan, a more realistic approach to recreation.

He said a bylaw would be placed before voters in the late spring and an attempt would be made to raise money through public subscription.

The target will be $100,000.

"If the recreation commission doesn't go ahead, the city will take the initiative," said Mayor Quaife.

MLA's WISHES

"During the past year, new members of council had an opportunity to come to grips with some very real problems; they now have their feet firmly placed, and 1969 will be a most challenging year, a year in which this council must forge ahead with new ideas and be prepared to carry them out."

Strachan

Ald. Tom Burge, representing North Cowichan, said: "A great step forward has been taken by the two councils inasmuch as they met on many occasions and discussed a great deal."

"Mayor Morton said although they have not always fully agreed there is one very good sign—"that is we are still talking."

Duncan magistrate Lance Heard conducted the swearing-in ceremony for one alderman, school board strustees, recreation commission members and advisory planning commission members. It was followed by an address by Rev. G. A. Kerr.

Morton Tells North Cowichan

By KLAUS MUENTER

NORTH COWICHAN — An increase in North Cowichan's mill rate was indicated at Monday's inaugural meeting of council when aldermen received the provisional 1969 budget. It included a $292,157 increase, pushing the total of last year's revised budget to $3,773,678.

After questions from Ald. Gerry Smith, Mayor Donald Morton said there could be an increase of about two or three mills.

However he advised council that a precise forecast could not be made because "this is a very provisional budget and we still have to work hard on the annual budget.

"The annual budget will come down when we know the provincial government grants."

He said it might be decided before April and the tax blow might be softened by an increase to the value of one mill.

The annual budget may not be decided until April.

RISING COSTS

This year, one mill will probably produce $28,000. It provided $25,600 last year. Three main reasons for the provisional budget increase are public works, $137,175; protection to persons and property, $95,807; and general government, $46,450.

Municipal clerk, A. Vandecasteyen said: "The increase not only reflects the rising costs of materials and labor but also increased costs for extra services and specific projects."

He said that staff increases for administration, projects and maintenance was responsible for the jump in public works costs.

Mr. Vandecasteyen said an estimated $53,000 would be on hand as the municipal share of the total cost. The balance would be paid by the provincial government.

LETTER PLAN

"We will have to do a considerable amount of thinking on the annual budget, and, no doubt, some agonizing decisions will have to be made," commented Ald. John Cannon.

His suggestion to provide area organizations with a newsletter giving the municipal financial situation in relation to the national situation was unanimously adopted.

Inclusion of operating costs of four fire departments, increased RCMP salaries, two additional RCMP constables and rising costs of the SPCA account for the increase in the protection to persons and property item.

SOCIAL WELFARE

Mr. Vandecasteyen said no provision had been made for an increase in social welfare but the municipal share of welfare costs, 89 cents per capita a month will cost the municipality $110,901 a year.

The largest projects, tentatively planned for this year under capital improvements, may be installation of a garbage incinerator at $100,000, and reconstruction of Chemainus River bridge.

R. A. Vye criticized snow-plowing at Crofton after a recent heavy snowfall, saying "The year was one of the poorest we had in the past 20 years."

He claimed that the contractor did not carry out his duties.

'WONDERFUL JOB'

"A child could have been lost in a fire and we should have another look at it," he said.

He was told municipal crews worked 400 hours overtime between Dec. 27 and Dec. 31 — as much as 18 hours a day without break.

Ald. Smith said: "The public works crews did a wonderful job. I have seen them working 24 hours a day, but it took me five hours to get a contractor to clear the snow in front of the hotel."

Port Alberni Mayor

Political Skirmishes Rapped

By MARY TAYLOR

PORT ALBERNI — Mayor Fred Bishop in his 1969 inaugural meeting statement Monday night re-emphasized the importance he attached to council unity.

He said: "I cannot believe that unity requires that we always agree on every matter before us. Indeed, I do most emphatically believe we should disagree strongly when necessary, based on personal conviction and then abide by majority decision.

MATTERS OF POLICY

"Continued skirmishes for political advantage," he said, harm council's total image and result in individuals becoming more concerned with political defence and offence than spending every possible effort in thinking out and planning broad important matters of policy for the future development of our city."

The mayor proposed a number of innovations to increase the efficiency of the municipal administration.

He suggested greater use of written memos, smaller committees to speed up business, increased attention to civic employee training and the possibility of a central switchboard to handle phone calls to all municipal offices.

SEWAGE TREATMENT

Mayor Bishop said an immediate decision must be made on what level of sewage treatment will be required in 1969, and meetings must be set up with residents of the most critical unsewered areas to prepare for the earliest possible start on this work in 1969.

Continued emphasis on planning to ensure development along the best long range lines required consideration of new zoning bylaws and a new land use plan. Study of housing needs, now well underway, must be given high priority, the mayor said.

The mayor requested the works committee to meet at once this week to finalize plans and to recommend 1969 policy to council so that residents could pick up local improvement petitions as soon as possible.

FLOOD PROTECTION

The mayor said the long-promised Somass River-Kitsuksis Creek flood protection work should begin as soon as weather permitted. The mayor said the city had recent assurances from both the federal and provincial governments to that effect.

Mayor Bishop also commented on plans for the industrial waterfront road. He said council expected to meet with representatives of the CPR at an early date.

Consultation with the city planning and engineering consultants showed the need for a decision concerning location and priority for a second crossing to unite the two major portions of the city.

He said present estimates show construction of another link would be expensive and quite possibly could not be done without an increase in the capital expenditure mill rate of 13.56 mills. Some decision must be reached on this before the capital budget was finalized for 1969, Mayor Bishop said.

The mayor also spoke of a new subdivision adjacent to Haslam Road to be opened up and sold as soon as weather conditions permit.

RCMP strength was to be increased to provide a full-time traffic detail. Reckless drivers would find this an expensive pastime the Mayor promised, adding "we intend to have our traffic bylaws enforced fairly but very firmly."

Cemetery improvements, a crackdown on abandoned car wrecks and unsightly premises and an arrangement for the regional district office to accept payment of municipal accounts for the convenience of residents in the former city of Alberni were included in the mayor's plans for the year ahead.

The mayor also called for the finance committee and city hall management to start preparation of a policy manual for the guidance of elected and administrative personnel, and also asked for revision of all outdated bylaws as a high priority matter.

Lake Cowichan

Fund Started For Johnson

LAKE COWICHAN — Projects to provide financial help for heart transplant prospect Gerry Johnson of Royston continue to spring up.

Newest is a Gerry Johnson Heart Fund being sponsored by the Lake Cowichan Kinsmen.

Mr. Johnson, now undergoing tests in a Houston hospital to determine if his case is suitable for a heart transplant operation, was a long-time resident of Lake Cowichan before moving to Royston.

The Lake Cowichan Kinsmen started the fund with a donation of $100, and other contributions have raised the total so far to $289.

Donations may be sent to the Lake Cowichan Toronto-Dominion Bank, the Lake News or Ernie's store.

In Victoria, Kinsmen's Club executives were to meet tonight to discuss holding a giant bingo in Memorial Arena with the proceeds going to Mr. Johnson.

Results of the tests being conducted on Mr. Johnson in St. Luke's Episcopal Hospital, Houston, probably won't be known for about four or five days, Mrs. Johnson said Monday.

In a telephone conversation with The Colonist from the Houston motel where she is staying, Mrs. Johnson said her husband was not feeling too well Monday.

"His stomach was upset all day," she said, probably from the new medicines he is being given.

Mr. Johnson, 43, has been bedridden with an ailing heart for the past two years.

Artist Dies

PORT ALBERNI—Well-known landscape artist Guy B. Roberts, of Lakeshore Road died Sunday afternoon.

Mr. Roberts and his brother Tom operated one of Canada's first art galleries, the nationally-known Roberts Gallery in Toronto.

Funeral will be held Wednesday in St. Alban's Church at 3 p.m.

Drivers Advised To Use Chains

PORT ALBERNI—Drivers using The Hump and the Port Alberni to Tofino road were advised to use chains after about six inches of snow fell Monday in the Port Alberni rural area.

"And where people have cleared paths, they have six foot tunnels, caused by piled snow," said a resident.

More snow has been forecast for today and temperatures are expected to drop below Monday's 30 degrees.

About four to six inches also fell at Gold River Monday. Council crews worked all day to clear the town's roads.

Islanders' Names Drawn

From CP

Three Vancouver Islanders were among 153 Canadians whose names were chosen Monday night for chances in the city of Montreal's eighth monthly voluntary tax drawings.

They are Mrs. Mary F. Thomas and G. Langdon of Victoria and Alex H. Smith of Ladysmith.

Names of the finalists will be drawn Sunday to decide which of the 153 takes the $100,000 first prize and lesser prizes ranging from $100 to $10,000. Each person whose name is drawn must answer questions on their knowledge of Montreal before claiming their prizes.

Teachers Given Increase

LAKE COWICHAN — Lake Cowichan teachers will receive a basic salary increase of 7.91 per cent from Jan. 1. The decision came in an arbitration board ruling Friday.

"The basic salary, including differential, $100 above the Cowichan scale, is 5.42 per cent and the actual payroll cost is four per cent," said Ron Kimak, school board secretary-treasurer. "There was no increase to administration on allowance."

The board said other grievances, including sick leave, educational leave for professional improvements were not within its jurisdiction.

'Municipalities Lack Control'

Firemen Seeking Vote

By NANCY BROWN

Sidney and North Saanich volunteer firemen want to become voting members of the fire committee because, they claimed Saturday, neither municipality is entitled to assume control over the department.

The firemen, due to quit their jobs en masse on Feb. 1, made the proposal as a means of resolving the present dispute over the hiring of a full-time fire chief.

In a letter to the two councils the firemen referred to an agreement which they said came to their attention after their resignations.

Under the 1960 agreement the firehall and lot were transferred to Sidney, while the firefighting equipment was deemed to be vested in the North Saanich fire protection district which later became the municipality of North Saanich.

Both parties to the agreement undertook to hold the assets in trust for the volunteer fire department.

"The agreement speaks for itself," said the letter, signed by fire department president Bill Atkinson.

"Under it neither municipality owns anything.

"They are, however, conditional trustees of all the assets for this association which comprises the succession of public-spirited individuals who for many years past have continued to volunteer their services to conduct the operations of both the fire and ambulance services in North Saancih and Sidney."

The firemen deplored the claims of both municipalities to fire department assets and also the assumption of control of authority over field operations by the joint fire committee on which they do not have a vote.

DIFFERENT ASPECT

The fire committee, they said, came into being following the formation of North Saanich and culminated in the refusal to accept the recommendations of the operating association that a full-time chief is now needed.

"The revelation of the existence of the agreement puts a totally different aspect on the present unhappy state of affairs for, with our rights restored, our resignations are no longer necessary and jointly and severally we still desire to render service to this area," continued the letter.

North Saanich Mayor J. B. Cumming said he is aware of the existence of the agreement, but he has never before seen it interpreted in the way the firemen did.

The letter will be referred to the municipal affairs department and to the municipal solicitor for study, he said.

MAYOR DOUBTFUL

"If the firemen are right, then it would resolve several matters," said the mayor, although he doubted that the interpretation was correct.

He said he still does not believe a full-time chief is necessary.

The firemen feel that a full-time chief is necessary to carry out fire inspections, enforce fire prevention and survey large buildings in the fast-developing areas.

Mayor Cumming contended that the Fire Underwriters Association said fire inspections should be carried out by qualified building inspectors, and he had suggested that the two building inspectors in Sidney and North Saanich could take over inspection and permit issuing duties.

He said the fire department needs to be updated and a substation built in another part of the district before a full-time chief is hired.

Sidney Mayor A. W. Freeman refused to make any comment.

"Enough damage has been done already," he said. "I feel press reports have been very misleading."

"We shall have fire and ambulance service, you can be sure of that," he said.

Storm Brews Over Garbage

By DON COLLINS

There was a new storm forming Saturday night that threatens to create a bigger snarl for Greater Victoria's garbage collection than the heavy snows of last week.

It could, according to some of the people involved, mean that:

- All existing dumps are operating illegally.
- If changes aren't made collection could become more expensive.
- One result could be no garbage collection at all for 16,000 to 20,000 people in the Langford - Colwood-Metchosin-Sooke areas.

Millstream Road dump operators are continuing to accept and burn refuse. They had been told that burning must stop by Jan. 1 and that they must live up to a 29-point program set out for them by the area health board.

One of the operators, Robert Scafe, said Saturday night he had planned to close his dump, but had changed his mind after making an investigation.

He had learned, he said, that regulations concerning garbage disposal are in the hands of the provincial pollution control board and not the regional health board.

It was necessary, he said, to obtain a permit from the provincial body before operating a garbage dump.

"I asked the top man if anyone in Victoria had such a permit and he said the answer was no," Mr. Scafe said. "Then I asked him if anyone had applied for such a permit and he again told me the answer was no."

A. W. Patenaude, who collects garbage in the Colwood-Langford - Metchosin - Sooke areas said he had learned that private concerns cannot hold such permits. They must be applied for by municipalities or water districts, he said.

The Hartland Road dump, which would be the site earmarked for all refuse if the Millstream Road dumps were closed, is operated by a private concern.

The no-burning regulation and 29 rules set out for the dumps were authorized by Greater Victoria medical health officer Dr. J. L. M. Whitbread.

Told of the claims that were being made and the decision of the Millstream Road dump operators to defy the regulations, Dr. Whitbread said:

"I'll have to look into that next week."

The pack-and-bury disposal system ordered for garbage by the health board was believed something that could be handled only by the Hartland Road dump.

Harold (Hal) Banks, Colwood representative on the regional board, said the privately-operated collection of garbage on a customer-paid basis in his unincorporated area might be forced out of business by the ban on burning.

He had been told by various garbage collection people that the new system would cost more.

Watery Storage

Max Lohbrunner's fishboat Mel has joined his beloved sealing ship Green in watery grave at Victoria's garbage wharf in Inner Harbor. Funnel and mast of Green, left, and double trolling poles of Mel project through floating logs at right. As far as harbor officials are concerned both will remain on bottom until owner considers he is finished with them or unless there is request to use that particular section of harbor. Lohbrunner, 83, right, convalescing in St. Joseph's Hospital after suffering from malnutrition, remembers sealing days in Bering Sea off Japanese coast, Aleutians, Alaska and Queen Charlotte Islands.—(Jim Ryan)

Damage to Yachts Could Be Avoided

Damage to private boats and marine installations from snow and frost in the Victoria area was estimated Saturday to be in the vicinity of $125,000, according to Victor Griffin, past commander of the Victoria Power Squadron.

Mr. Griffin, a man who has "been around boats all my life," said the principal damage to boats which were sunk would be to superstructure and upholstery. Engines, even if submerged, he said, could be flushed out with anti-rust compounds and put back in working order at not too great expense, if treated promptly.

"I realize that damage was heavy and that a great many boathouses collapsed, but it should be remembered that many of these buildings were not expensive in the first place, and that they can be repaired for a couple of hundred dollars," Mr. Griffin said.

He added that he did not believe many marine engine blocks cracked in the icy weather. He said boat engines were not out in the wind and cold as an automobile engine would be. They were protected to some extent and even if submerged, were in a higher temperature than a car.

"I think the whole thing was dramatized, and while I feel for boat-owners who suffered damage to their craft, I don't think the over-all picture is nearly as serious as it has been portrayed," Mr. Griffin said.

Much of the damage occurred because to the average layman his boat was a toy, he said.

"Most of them don't have the slightest idea of how to take care of them, and in a sudden onslaught such as that over the holiday, no precautions had been taken."

His boat and boathouse had suffered no damage, Mr. Griffin added, because he had gone out early in the storm and shovelled the snow off the roof.

Working Wives Approved

Singles Eligible to Adopt

Two major changes in the procedure for adopting a child in Greater Victoria were made after consultation with a parents' committee, Mrs. B. Levitz Packford said Saturday.

The Family and Childrens' Service supervisor said that from now on single adults over 30 can adopt children as can married couples where the wife is working.

Mrs. Packford said that the changes were made after many discussions with an Adopting Parents' Association, a committee comprised of people who had already taken youngsters.

Adoption of children by single adults has been allowed by the Adoption Act but it had not been the policy of the local Family and Childrens' Service to accept such applications, Mrs. Packford said.

"In our society today there are many one-parent families and we are catching up with reality," Mrs. Packford said.

In the past, she added, the service had insisted that in the event of an adoption by a married woman and husband, the working wife stay home for at least a year.

Now the working wife can continue with her job providing the service approves of the arrangements made for the care of the child during the probation period — usually six months.

Mrs. Packford said that the changes in policy had been made to encourage as many people as possible to adopt children who needed homes and to make the whole business of adoption as uncomplicated as possible.

At the present time, the supervisor said, adoption procedure covers a period of about five months for a newly-born baby boy.

Pump-Priming Fund Urged for Housing By Mayor Stephen

Mayor Bares Plans for '69

By DESMOND BILL

Mayor Hugh Stephen proposed Monday that Victoria set up a $150,000 pump-priming fund that could result in construction of $3,000,000 worth of low-rental housing in the city.

It would be used to help non-profit organizations such as church groups, unions and service clubs willing to sponsor housing projects.

The mayor suggested the money be given to such groups for up to 5 per cent of the cost of a project. The groups would raise the other 5 per cent required as a down payment and the balance of 90 per cent would come from NHA loans.

It was the major new initiative that he proposed in his inaugural address to the first meeting of this year's council.

But his speech — which took him one hour and 20 minutes to read — also reviewed practically every aspect of the city's business during 1968.

It ranged from a warning about the "frightening" increase in glue-sniffing among juveniles to delight over the "astounding" increase in assessments.

Among the mayor's proposals for this year were:

● A new zoning concept for downtown development.

● Finishing the enclosure of Bowker Creek inside Victoria's boundaries.

● A new method for drawing up the city's operating budget.

● Provision of funds to enable police to travel to other provinces and arrest men who desert their wives and ignore court orders to maintain them and their families.

The mayor said his proposals were necessarily fewer than usual because major programs must await preparation of a new five-year capital budget that will not be drawn up until later this year.

Twice in his speech he was critical of the provincial government.

He deplored its refusal "to make even a token start" on the new Patricia Bay Highway. One result has been that the city's new north-south artery, Rose Street, "ends in nothing at our boundaries, whence all the traffic funnels back again on to an already overcrowded Douglas Street."

And he said the government's new driver demerit system had more than doubled the court load of cases, which would result in additional costs, coupled with a loss of revenue from the former system of fines. He said that if municipalities were to continue to pay local court costs then they must either be given a government subsidy or allowed to levy costs against drivers receiving demerits.

The mayor said he spent more time working on sewage disposal problems than any other subject during last year, but, despite increased regional cooperation, the issue was still at an impasse.

He said this was because the proposal to discharge sewage into the ocean had generated more "emotional and subjective" opinion than any other issue. Patience and restraint would be necessary to solve it, he said.

President's Pay Packet Doubled to $200,000

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The House of Representatives voted Monday to double the pay of the president — from $100,000 to $200,000 — effective with Richard Nixon's inauguration despite an economizer's contention the president-elect did not want his salary boosted.

In addition to his taxable salary, the president would continue to receive a taxable $50,000 to cover expenses and nontaxable $40,000 for other travel and entertainment expenses. Congress appropriates separate funds to operate the White House.

Building Help Easier

By IAN STREET

British Columbians in future will be able to get a promise in writing that the government will provide them with a $1,000 home acquisition grant so that they can use it in arranging financing of a new home.

Municipal Affairs Minister Dan Campbell announced Monday that although the actual grant will continue to be made only when the owner is in occupancy, provincial housing authorities will provide a letter of intent to those who meet requirements.

Under regulations in effect until now, persons seeking the grant had to occupy the house before making application for the $1,000. The new system will let owners pre-qualify in what Mr. Campbell said was an all-out drive to increase the number of new housing starts in the province this spring.

Latest figures, made public last week, showed housing starts in major B.C. municipalities in the first 10 months of 1968 increased 6 per cent over the corresponding period in the record year of 1967. Units completed were 23 per cent higher than the same period in 1967.

Home builders who qualify for the provincial grants, Mr. Campbell said, can use the letter of intent obtained from the housing administration to obtain greater flexibility in financing. "We want to give it a lift now," he added, "to permit more housing starts to get under way in the spring."

Meanwhile, provincial housing officials disclosed that a total of 43,800 home acquisition grants have been made since the program began April 1, 1966.

Although there is no official breakdown, it is estimated that approximately 75 per cent of the grants were for the $500 initial amount, which applied to both new and existing homes and was dropped last July.

Same Flight, Flip

Eleven of the 28 persons aboard were killed. Of the 17 survivors one was in critical condition.

The Convair 580, Flight 737 which originated in Washington and stopped in Harrisburg, crashed into 15 inches of snow on a golf course and flipped upside down. That was the same way Flight 736 went down Christmas Eve, killing 20. Twenty seven survived.

WINTER STORM

A spokesman for Allegheny Airlines, which has lost only three planes in its history, said there was no immediate explanation for the similarities.

The flight was running an hour late because of a winter storm that swept through the state.

The Christmas Eve tragedy also happened on the heels of a winter storm. The plane went down in an icy marsh midway up a mountain about three miles south of the airport.

German Party Alters Stand

STUTTGART (AP)—The Free Democratic party, the small voice of opposition in the West German Bundestag, switched policy Monday and proposed normal relations between East and West Germany.

Position on Rhodesia

Promise to Blacks Backed by Canada

LONDON (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau lined up with President Kenneth Kaunda of Zambia Monday in opposing any weakening in Britain's original promise to the black Rhodesians.

Trudeau said at a news conference that he and Kaunda at a 75-minute meeting affirmed their backing for the principle that Britain must not give legal independence to Rhodesia before the Africans are given majority rule in that white-supremacy country.

OPPOSITE VIEW

Trudeau said Sunday that Britain has departed from its original commitment to the black Rhodesians—no independence before majority rule for them.

He has said that all arguments on the issue have been exhausted and that it is largely an illusion that the Commonwealth could settle it.

Rhodesia will be discussed at the conference but the Nigeria-Biafra war is not on the agenda.

DEFENCE DISCUSSED

They discussed Anglo-Canadian defence, foreign, trade and economic affairs.

Informants said Wilson tried to persuade Trudeau to maintain Canada's commitment on the North Atlantic Treaty Organization.

NATO is not on the Commonwealth meeting agenda, but the informants said Wilson made a determined bid to win an assurance that Canada would continue its role in Europe's defence.

Trudeau said Wilson and his colleagues did not look flustered or in the least disturbed by the fact that Canada is reviewing

Police Intervention

Professors Say 'March In'

LONDON (CP) — Seven Canadian professors have urged a declaration of Canadian readiness "to consider with like-minded Commonwealth members whether the time has come for international police intervention" in Rhodesia.

But such readiness should not involve any pre-judging of the issue either way, the Canadian academics add.

All professors of the social sciences, they also call on Prime Minister Trudeau to reaffirm the principle of no independence for Rhodesia without African majority rule.

The teachers make their statements in a letter to The Times today.

Signatories of the letter are Gerald Caplin of the Ontario Institute of Education; Frank Chalk of Sir George Williams, Peter Gutkind of McGill and Donald Savage of Loyola, all Montreal universities; and Gerald Helleiner, David Nowlan and Cranford Pratt, all of the University of Toronto.

The signatories say they all have "African experience."

Discotheque Foursome

Closed-Lips 'Nice Girl' Trudeau's Dinner Date

● Jet-set Eva strikes out. Page 15.

LONDON (CP)—Prime Minister Trudeau went dining and dancing with an English girl Monday night at a swinging discotheque in affluent Berkeley Square.

The girl was not Eva Rittinghausen, a self-described jet-set divorcee whom Trudeau took to lunch Saturday.

Trudeau said Monday in reply to questions about his relationship with Miss Rittinghausen that he does not suffer indiscreet women gladly. She had given a dozen or so interviews about her meeting with the prime minister.

Trudeau also said earlier Monday that he was going to date "a very nice girl and I'm sure she won't talk to you." The "you" meant reporters.

His Monday night date was described by one of his aides as a university graduate about 30 or 32 years old whom Trudeau had known for a couple of years. The aide declined to give her name.

Trudeau and his date were accompanied by Gordon Gibson, his executive assistant, and Gibson's wife.

The Big Issue for 1969: HOUSING

Townhouses

Oak Bay To Fill Its Gaps

By CLEMENT CHAPPLE

Garden courts and townhouses will take priority in development of Oak Bay, Mayor Fred Hawes said in his inaugural speech to council Monday night.

Hawes

Pointing out that Oak Bay has little commerce and no industry from which to draw revenue, Mayor Hawes said, "we must take a close look at our population density . . ."

"We have no choice but to plan for greater density of population on the remaining undeveloped lands."

This will require between 400 and 500 new housing units each year for the next three years, the Mayor said.

The scale of new construction would compare to an average of only 19 apartment units each year between 1961 and 1967. Relaxation of apartment controls a year ago brought the number of units last year to 73, more than 15 per cent of the projected construction.

Mayor Hawes named specific areas for apartment or townhouse construction in Oak Bay. They are:

- The area between Milton and Chaucer Streets, bounded by Elgin and Foul Bay Roads, possibly enlarged to include land between Elgin and Hampshire Roads.
- The area on the north side of Granite Street, from Foul Bay Road.
- The former site of the Old Men's Home on Cadboro Bay Road, if current attempts to acquire the land are successful.
- The Victoria Riding Club property.

He announced a strengthening of the municipality's advisory planning committee by addition of three councillors and four citizens to the body.

Two of the three Oak Bay aldermen re-elected Dec. 7 were greeted Monday night by Mayor Hawes.

Aldermen Ian Horne and Douglas Watts read the oaths in the short ceremony. Ald. Alex Hendry was in hopital and unable to attend the swearing-in.

Saanich Carries Attack With New Committee

By DON GAIN

Saanich Mayor Hugh Curtis has set up a new standing committee of council to tackle the housing crisis in the municipality.

The mayor made the announcement in his address at the 1969 statutory council meeting Monday night.

"In order that this municipality may be in a position to do all possible in the broad field of housing, I am attempting to underscore the importance with which I view this work by establishing a new standing committee of council to be known very simply as 'housing,'" the mayor said.

As and When

The new committee will bring together other municipal departments as and when required in tackling the subject.

This will involve the lands department, social services and comptroller's departments and Roy Broughton, in his capacity as Saanich representative on the B.C. Housing Commission, will report through the new committee.

The mayor appointed Ald. Edith Gunning to head the new committee because of the intensive and extensive study and work she has done in this field.

Money Vital

The mayor warned that many 1969 projects will depend on the money market.

"Our requirements at this time are in the neighborhood of $2,000,000, a not unreasonably large amount of money when one considers the population of this municipality, its taxable assessment and our unused borrowing power.

"If we are able to market these debentures early in the year, then we shall be in quite good shape to carry out much of our program for the forthcoming 12 months. The third indoor recreational facility, the swimming pool community centre complex at Lambrick Park in Gordon Head, will naturally be dependent upon the market situation as we find it in the next months."

He warned that the municipal bond market at the moment "is virtually non-existent" and that, unless some stabilization in interest rates evolves, the selling of municipal bonds will continue to be difficult.

Council approved the 1969 provisional budget which calls for $10,685,000 in expenditures, about $1,166,000 above last year's budget.

Newcomer

Three former incumbent aldermen and one elected for the first time were sworn in at the start of the meeting by Judge M. L. Tyrwhitt-Drake.

The former incumbents are Ed Lum, Alan Newberry and veteran Leslie Passmore. The new alderman is Frank Waring.

The judge told council he was sure that all aldermen knew that an alderman's life was not "all junkets and expense accounts."

Housing Given Emphasis

By BOB PETHICK

Esquimalt will fall heir to the 15-acre Macaulay Point area, council was told Monday night.

In his opening address Mayor Ray Bryant told council:

"This is the appropriate time to announce that after considerable negotiations and meetings with the federal government, it is their intention to turn over to us that portion of the Work Point Barracks area known as Macaulay Point.

"Several meetings were held in 1968 relating to this matter and although formalities have not been completed in total, we must begin to make preparations as to what maximum use can be made of this area."

RECREATIONAL VALUE

Mayor Bryant said the area contained a historic site and consideration should be given as to whether the site should be developed in that context.

He said it will contain potential recreational value, "and I would ask the council to consider these possibilities as well."

"This is not the only piece of property that may be acquired from the defence department, but it is the one which we are most likely to acquire during 1969 and I would request all committees of council to study this property early in the year," he said.

COMMITTEE EXPANDED

Mayor Bryant said the subject that is becoming important in the municipal area is housing. "I feel this subject has become important enough to be included in our committee system, and I am expanding the planning and zoning committee to include the subject of housing."

He said a major area of investigation for council would be to seek out and identify what the people of Esquimalt want in connection with recent press releases dealing with recreational subjects.

Martin Institute

Units Close To Handover

By IAN STREET

Negotiations are now in the final stage for the handover by the provincial government of the administration of the new Eric Martin Institute to the Royal Jubilee Hospital, it was learned here Monday.

Health Minister Ralph Loffmark was reported to have sent a letter to the Jubilee board setting out the government proposal. He refused to discuss it until board members had a chance to study the proposal, but indicated the institute now nearing completion would become part of Jubilee.

The minister also indicated that when the 120-bed Eric Martin Institute is opened sometime this spring, the present 40-bed psychiatric wing at the Jubilee would be converted to other use. The patients in it would be transferred to the Eric Martin Institute which adjoins the hospital.

UNIT COSTS

Mr. Loffmark announced Monday he has requested medical authorities to recommend a system of units costs to be paid by the government under the proposed new $1-a-day outpatient care for mental patients.

It follows a cabinet order passed about three weeks ago which authorized the health minister to designate certain general hospitals as centres for out-patient psychiatric care. Mr. Loffmark said the four locations where such action will be taken in the next few months are at the Eric Martin Institute, Vancouver General Hospital, the Health Sciences Centre at UBC, and the Youth Development Centre in Burnaby.

MAJOR MOVE

The minister said it was a "very major departure" leading to the introduction of public financing for out-patient psychiatric services. All in-patients at provincial mental institutions and in psychiatric wings of general hospitals now are covered by B.C. Hospital Insurance, but Mr. Loffmark said the extension of $1-a-day care to out-patients will enable more people to be treated within the community.

This is a major part of the decentralization of mental health services in the province, he said.

RCMP Policy

Merger Ends Policing

The RCMP won't undertake the policing of Langford, Colwood and Metchosin if they become a municipality as a result of the Feb. 1 vote, Assistant Commissioner G. R. Engel said Monday.

He said a federal regulation prohibits the force undertaking the policing of any new municipalities with populations of more than 15,000.

"Those three areas have somewhat over that population," he said.

At present the RCMP is working under a provincial agreement with the attorney-general's department, added Assistant Commissioner Engel.

"Of course, we wouldn't withdraw as soon as the vote was taken or anything like that," he added.

"We would make some arrangement with the attorney-general's department on how long we could continue there."

Regrets Delay

Cumming Upholds Hospital

By NANCY BROWN

It will take a bold and powerful man to upset the array of advocates of a hospital in the northern peninsula, North Saanich Mayor J. B. Cumming said Monday night.

In his inaugural address to council, he said that he has a firm belief that when decisions are made on the peninsula hospital North Saanich will have little reason for resentment and regrets.

"The Agnew-Peckham report cost more than $40,000—it was a most excellent study," he said.

ON RECORD

"The Victoria Hospital planning committee, the BCHIS and the several ministers of health have been on record for a number of years on the need for a hospital on the peninsula; the provincial government will pay 60 per cent of the bill.

"It will be a bold and powerful man who upsets that array," he said.

Mayor Cumming said it is intended that a referendum for the construction of acute care hospitals should go to the people in the fall.

'POOR INDICATION'

"I doubt, somehow, that we will be ready in the time proposed to lay plans before the public.

"The time lost and controversy over the extended care is a poor indication for the future."

Loan Bylaw Raised

School Borrowing Hits Municipalities

"School boards used to borrow through the provincial treasury but now it is the responsibility of the municipalities. We have to borrow money at the expense of the property owners. This is another example of the government putting responsibility on the municipalities," he said.

Remarks were made after treasurer Peter Cairns said the annual loan bylaw was up from $400,000 to $500,000 and this was largely due to the new system of school financing.

"We looked into it. It is in the act and all perfectly legal. It disturbed me," Mayor Bryant said.

Injuries Undetermined

Gorge Survivor Happy as Lark

Three-year-old Karen Anne Fairburn, who was near death for 24 hours after a fall Dec. 19 into the icy waters of the Gorge near Craigflower Bridge, is home from St. Joseph's Hospital.

Though smiling and seemingly healthy, Karen's injuries will not be known fully for some time. It took doctors a long time to warm up her body and get her blood flowing properly.

She missed Christmas at home but Santa visited twice, once in the intensive-care ward, once in the children's.

The little blonde has trouble speaking since the accident, but as an inquiring visitor departed, she blew him a silent kiss goodbye.

Son Tries to Upset Father's Million-Dollar Will

By A. H. MURPHY

A will in which millionaire Victoria businessman Allan Douglas Ford left his Australian son, John Douglas Ford, $50,000 and most of the $1,102,792 remainder to charity, is being contested in British Columbia Supreme Court.

The hearing, which opened Monday, promised to be long and complex and will probably occupy most of the week.

D. M. Gordon is acting for Royal Trust Co., executors of the $1,152,792 estate, and the son is represented by Donald G. Cameron. Mr. Cameron is being advised and assisted by two Australian lawyers, R. G. Davern Wright and James B. Duggan, both of Melbourne. Hugh L. Henderson is representing Christ Church Building Fund, one of the beneficiaries.

The 1958 will which John Ford is trying to upset made cash bequests to friends in addition to the $50,000 to the son, and the residue of the estate was to be divided among a number of Victoria institutions, including the Family Welfare and Children's Aid Society, Gorge Road Hospital, YMCA and YWCA building funds, Multiple Sclerosis Society, Victoria Symphony Society, Queen Alexandra Solarium and the Salvation Army.

A cash bequest of $10,000 was ordered for the Art Gallery of Greater Victoria, and Christ Church Building Fund was to get 5,000 shares of Steep Rock Mine.

Christ Church Cathedral is interested in the hearing because a provision in the bequest of shares to the building fund provides that they may not be sold until they reach $40 or alternatively, for 20 years. The stock now stands at about $6.50.

If the 1958 will was upset, a 1933 will would come into force. Under this testament the son would receive most of the estate, subject to two codicils which made bequests to two Victoria institutions amounting in all to about $350,000.

The court was told Monday there were six codicils to the 1958 will. Mostly they delineated bequests, none over $25,000, to friends and people who had been good to Mr. Ford.

One, however, left Tancred, Mr. Ford's home at 1012 Terrace Avenue, to the city. A collection of furniture was also left to the municipality, in the hope that it would be exhibited in Craigdarroch Castle, if and when it was converted into a museum.

The junior Mr. Ford is trying to upset the will on the grounds that when it was made his father was of unsound mind, memory and understanding and suffering from delusions.

Mr. Gordon said Monday that contention was not true. When the testator made his will he was a successful, well preserved and active businessman, who walked to his office every day, Mr. Gordon said.

Mr. Ford died in October, 1967. He was married in 1908, but had been separated from his wife for 31 years. Following the separation, Mr. Gordon said, Mrs. Ford took her five-year-old son to Australia.

Mrs. Ford died a year before her husband and the son did not see his father again until the father's last illness.

Former western regional vice-president of the Royal Trust, Robert Phipps, said the final will was the result of many memoranda, drafts and literally hundreds of hours of discussion.

This testimony took all of Monday.

The trust company officer's evidence showed that many changes had been made in bequests over the years. At one time, the Art Gallery was beneficiary to the value of several hundred thousand dollars, but there were disagreements on terms of acceptance and the final bequest was $10,000.

Several officers of Royal Trust attested to signatures on the various documents.

John Ford, a radio news reporter from Melbourne, sat in court throughout Monday's proceedings.
